NOT Know What to Do in a Black Fog? Why, take a seat on the STAGE COACH now running to ST. ALBANS and BACK, of course! The state of the atmosphere will prevent you from seeing the railway and the telegraph poles, and enable you to "forget the spreading of the hideous town," as Mr. Morris has it in "The Earthly Paradise"; and you can play at being your own grandfather (or your grandmother, if you like), just as comfortably as if you were sitting at home in your best Chippendale arm-chair, with your feet on the fender, in the wainscoted back parlour of that dear little red-bricked house of yours, taking snuff, and reading the "Gentleman's Magazine" for the year One by the light of a tallow candle. (N.B.—Mr. Punch means to try it himself.)—Vide "Punch," [illegible], 1888.

Wines supplied by Hedges and Butler.

The Subscription List will be Opened on Tuesday, the 13th inst., and will be Closed on or before Saturday, the 17th inst. Messrs. Cox and Co., 17, Charing-cross, are authorised to receive subscriptions for the undermentioned DEBENTURES and SHARES of the BERGVIK COMPANY (Limited).—Registered under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1886.

Debentures	2,500 Five per Cent. First Debentures of £100	£250,000
Share Capital	25,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preferred Shares of £10 each	250,000
	10,000 Deferred Shares of £10 each	100,000
		£600,000

The Five per Cent. Debentures are redeemable by annual drawings at £110 in 20 years from 1st January, 1890, by the operation of a cumulative sinking fund of 1½ per cent. per annum. The company reserves to itself the right to increase the amount to be paid off at £110, in any one year, on giving three months' notice by public advertisement of its intention to do so.

The debentures will have attached to them interest coupons payable on 1st January and 1st July in each year. The first coupon will be payable 1st July, 1889, and will be for eight months, as interest on the debentures will run from 1st November, 1888.

The preferred shares will be entitled to a cumulative preference dividend of 6 per cent. per annum, and to priority in respect of capital over the deferred shares.

Price of issue par, payable as follows:

	Debentures.	Preferred Shares.	Deferred Shares.
On application	£10 per cent.	£1 per Share.	£1 per Share.
On allotment	15	2	2
On 15th January, 1889	75	7	7
	£100	£10	£10

Holders of the outstanding Five per Cent. and Six per Cent. Debentures of the Bergvik and Ala Company, amounting to £46,900 and £126,100 respectively, who may deposit the same with the coupons due on and after the 1st June and 1st July, 1889, attached, at the bankers of the company, before the closing of the subscription, will be entitled to receive in exchange an equivalent amount in debentures of the present issue. All outstanding debentures not so exchanged will be drawn for redemption at par, on the 1st June and 1st July, 1889, in accordance with the provisions of the debentures.

The coupons on these debentures due 1st December, 1888, and 1st January, 1889, will be paid at the Office of the Bergvik Company (Limited).

PROSPECTUS.

The company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring, in the manner hereafter mentioned, the whole of the properties, forests, cutting-leases, saw-mills, paper-pulp factory, stock-in-trade of all descriptions, business, goodwill (except cash balances in hand and goods sold in ordinary course before the 1st November, 1888), &c., of the Bergvik and Ala Company, Sweden, as a going concern, as stated in the agreements for sale hereafter mentioned.

The business has been carried on by the vendor company for many years, and the certificate of Messrs. R. Mackay and Co., Chartered Accountants, of 3, Lothbury, shows:

1. That the average profit of the vendor company, from its shipments of deals for the eight years 1880 to 1887 inclusive, has amounted to £[illegible] per annum, on an average annual shipment of 20,701 standards, i.e., a profit of £2 15s. 7d. per standard.

2. That the average profit of the paper-pulp factory for the same period has amounted to £3,400 per annum.

During the present year a material increase has taken place in the value of wood, the average price realised by the vendor company showing a considerable increase over the average of recent years, and an increase of fully 15s. per standard over that of 1887. As the cost of production has remained practically stationary, this increase in price represents a substantial increase in profit.

A schedule of the freehold and leasehold properties included in the sale, and amounting to about 534,342 acres; an estimate of the number of logs available for cutting in the company's forests during the next 20 years, and amounting to 6,575,000; statements as to the amounts annually re-invested in freeholds and leaseholds from 1880 to 1887; a specification of the amount of logs annually purchased from peasants and crown forests from 1880 to 1887, and maps of the localities where the properties are situated, are open to inspection as stated below. An explanatory summary furnished by the vendor company is enclosed in the prospectus.

From these documents it will be seen that independently of fresh purchases of forest property, an annual shipment of from 15,000 to 17,000 standards may be anticipated for 50 years to come, at the expiration of which period there will remain a very large quantity of trees of smaller dimensions on the company's properties, as to the number and value of which it is impossible to form a reliable estimate. The sum re-invested in fresh property during the years 1880—1887 has amounted to £86,450, or an average of £10,806 per annum, and it may be confidently assumed that re-investments on the same scale will enable the company to maintain easily an average annual shipment of 20,000 standards.

Taking the profit on 20,000 standards at £2 15s. per standard (see average profit of 1880—1887), the company should have, from this source, an annual profit of	£55,000
And from the paper-pulp factory (see average results for 1880—1887)	£3,400
Together	£58,400
The company requires:
For the service of the debenture capital	£21,250
For 6 per cent. dividend on the preferred shares	15,000
Together	£36,250

This result, while allowing £10,000 per annum for reinvestment in fresh property would leave to the company the sum of £12,000 available for dividend on the deferred shares.

These figures take no account of the increase in the selling price of the present year, which, if maintained (and as the last few years have been years of universal trade depression, it is reasonable to expect that such will be the case), would materially increase the surplus profit available for dividend on the deferred shares.

As the stock-in-trade on hand on 1st November, 1888, included in the sale, consisting of sawn wood, logs, paper pulp, chemicals, coals, &c., is stated by the vendors to amount in value to about £85,000, and as the agreed purchase price will leave a cash balance in the hands of the company of £75,000, the total working capital of the company can be reckoned at £160,000.

The purchase price, which includes the stock, valued at about £85,000, as above mentioned, has been fixed by the vendor company at £525,000, of which £100,000 are payable either in cash or in fully-paid shares at par, at the company's option. The present debenture charge of £173,000, consisting of £46,900 Five per Cent. and £126,100 Six per Cent. Debentures, with the interest up to the date of redemption (the maximum of which is £10,000), will be redeemed by exchange or payment out of the purchase money. A sufficient amount will be deposited with bankers in London for the purpose. Should the interest to be paid amount to less than £10,000, the difference will be handed to the vendor company. The purchasers will pay all debts and liabilities attaching to the property appearing by the balance-sheet of the 1st November, 1888. The vendor company will pay all expenses connected with the formation of the company up to allotment.

The agents in London for the sale of the vendor company's shipments and the manager in Sweden have intimated their willingness to continue to act in similar capacities for this company, if the board desire it.

In order to comply with the requirements of the Swedish law, the property to be purchased will be vested in a Swedish Corporation, specially formed for the purpose, the whole of the capital of which will be the property of and be held by the company.

It is proposed to apply to the Stock Exchange in due course for a quotation.

The following contracts have been entered into, viz.:

1. An agreement dated the 9th day of November, 1888, between the Bergvik och Ala Aktiebolag (Bergvik and Ala Company) of the one part, and the Bergvik Company (Limited), of the other part, which has scheduled thereto a draft of an agreement to be entered into between the Bergvik och Ala Aktiebolag (Bergvik and Ala Company), of the one part, and the Bergvik och Ala Nya Aktiebolag (Bergvik and Ala New Company), of the other part, on the constitution of the latter company. Certain subsidiary arrangements for covering the charges and expenses of the formation of the company, and in relation to the issue of the capital, have been entered into by the vendor company, or on its behalf, but the company is not a party to these arrangements and will incur no liability in respect thereof, all amounts payable thereunder being discharged by the vendor company out of the purchase price above stated; and there are numerous trade contracts, leases, agreements, and arrangements connected with the trade of the vendor company which are taken over by the new company. Subscribers must waive any right to the publication of the dates and names of parties to or particulars of such subsidiary and other agreements or arrangements or any further compliance with the 38th section of the Companies Act, 1867, than is contained in this prospectus and will be deemed to have done so.

Copies of the above-mentioned contracts, Messrs. Mackay and Co.'s certificate, the schedules, summary, and other documents and maps above referred to, relating to the property sold, the memorandum and articles of association of the Bergvik Company (Limited), and the statutes of the new Swedish Company, are open for inspection at the offices of the solicitors of the company.

Forms of application for debentures and shares can be obtained at the bankers, brokers, and offices of the company. The deposit-money of any applicant not receiving an allotment will be returned in full, and such applicants as may receive a less amount of debentures or shares than they apply for will have the surplus deposit-moneys credited to the sums due on allotment on the debentures or shares allotted to them, the surplus, if any, being returned. Failure to pay any instalment will render all previous payments liable to forfeiture. Applications and debentures of the vendor company for exchange must be lodged with the bankers of the company.

PROSPECTUS.

Messrs. Martin and Co., Bankers, and their agents in Paris, Messrs. J. Allard and Cie., Bankers, will receive subscriptions on behalf of this company, which has been formed for the purpose of carrying on the business of cab proprietors and jobmasters in Paris, and ultimately, if deemed advisable, at other of the principal towns in the Republic of France.

Visitors to Paris cannot fail to be surprised at the heavy, uncomfortable, and ugly public vehicles plying for hire, and above all the inferior class of horses in the French metropolis. Residents and the French Press both join in this general chorus of complaint.

In the business world of Paris a very great desire is also expressed to obtain a swifter and more elegant vehicle. Notwithstanding the enormous traffic in London, and the comparative narrowness of its streets with that of Paris, it is an undeniable fact that it is possible to travel through the most crowded parts of London and its environs with much greater facility, speed, and safety than can be obtained in Paris under its present service.

Having regard to the increasing number of English and American visitors to Paris and the enormous influx of visitors expected at the approaching Universal Exhibition of 1889, the present time is considered most opportune for effectually and substantially establishing the sound working of this company's undertaking. It is a fact that in 1878, the year in which the last Paris Exhibition was held, the takings of the Compagnie Générale des Petites Voitures at Paris were more than double the amount of those of the previous year.

It is the intention of the directors to use English horses only, and to charge the same price as actually paid in Paris at the present time, viz., 1f. 50c. (or 1/2½) by the course, or 2f. per hour.

The scheme of the company has been very favourably received by many people in Paris, and the Prefecture has already approved of it, and granted the required authorisation to set on foot this most promising enterprise.

The cabs will be built by Messrs. Forder Bros. and Co., of Long-acre, London, and Wolverhampton, and will be the same pattern as the well-known "S. (coronet) T." London cabs, which are admitted to be the best and most comfortable public vehicles at present in use. The "Forder Hansom" has been supplied to her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

The company will become the sole agents in France of Messrs. Forder Bros. and Co., and will acquire the sole right of user of the French patent for the manufacture of steel and rubber tyres for cabs and other vehicles, bicycle and trolley wheels, and will be in a position to purchase upon very favourable terms the absolute rights to such patents.

Particular attention is directed to the fact that in addition to the extra comfort derived from the use of the "Noiseless" tyre, the life of a cab fitted with it is found to last between 10 and 12 years, as against the life of cabs fitted with the ordinary tyres, which only last between five and six years, and, inasmuch as the royalty for each pair of noiseless tyres amounts to £5, the directors have every confidence in anticipating very large profits to the company from this source alone.

It is the custom in Paris among cab proprietors to receive from each of their drivers a deposit of 200f. as a security for the amount of the daily hiring of the cab and the proper care thereof, and the cost of hiring a cab per day appears to be not less than 18f., or say 15s., increasing to 25f., or say £1 per day. Another important feature in favour of the enterprise is that whereas in England cabs are practically used only on week days, in France they would be worked every day, and more especially on Sundays and holidays.

A very careful estimate of the profit to be made on 300 cabs has been made by the directors, which can be seen at the offices of the company. The result shows, after payment of all expenses and the utmost allowance for depreciation in value of stock and plant, a dividend of 14 per cent. per annum. It is obvious that a higher dividend could be declared after taking into consideration the profits to be derived from the sale of the noiseless tyres.

Compagnie Générale des Petites Voitures at Paris pays 8 per cent. dividend, and it is well known that similar companies make large profits.

No directors' fees will be drawn, but their remuneration left entirely in the hands of the shareholders to be voted at the general meeting.

All expenses (except the usual brokerage) up to allotment will be paid by the founders.

A contract dated the 15th day of October, 1888, has been entered into between F. W. Stancomb, on behalf of the company, of the one part, and Jacques Mizraki, of the other part, whereby the company agrees to take over the contract made between Messrs. Forder Bros. and Co. and Jacques Mizraki, and also the contract made between the Shrewsbury and Talbot Cab and Noiseless Tyre Company and the said Jacques Mizraki, in consideration of the sum of £5,000 and 5,000 shares.

The above contracts may be inspected at the offices of the solicitors to the company, and prospectuses, memorandum, and articles of association may be obtained of the secretary to the company.

There are contracts relating to managers, servants, officers. There are also contracts relating to the expenses connected with its formation, and which are defrayed by the founders, but which may technically constitute contracts within the meaning of Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867. Applicants for shares will be deemed to have notice thereof, and to waive any further compliance with that section.

Allotments will, as far as possible, be made in the strict order of application, and should the number of shares allotted be less than the number applied for, the surplus paid on deposit will be credited towards the amount subsequently payable on allotment.

Should no allotment be made, deposits will be returned in full.

Prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained of the solicitors, of the bankers, and at the offices of the company.

Application will be made in due course for quotation on the Stock Exchange.

27th October, 1888.

IMPORTANT TELEGRAPHIC ARRANGEMENTS.

I WISH to call close attention to a new departure in my business, which is of the utmost importance to country dealers. I have made arrangements with the Post Office for a direct wire into my own offices, thus saving some ten to twenty minutes on messages. I need hardly point out the advantages to customers dealing at a distance, who are thus put in actual contact with my offices from every part of the United Kingdom. Thus a message sent from

MY CITY OFFICES to MANCHESTER is DELIVERED in FIVE MINUTES.

AGRICULTURAL OUTLOOK.

November has always been deemed uncertain in respect to weather, and the past week afforded a perfect exemplification of remarkable changes in temperature, as well as in other meteorological influences, bringing gales, rain, snow, frosts, fogs, but at its close comparative calm and a little brightness. Still farmers have on the whole good reason to praise the autumnal season of 1888; large breadths of wheat have been sown under favourable conditions, and in few instances are lands so thoroughly saturated that any serious interruption has been experienced, either to the lifting and storing of roots, or seeding the land to the leading cereal crop, which are the two important operations of the period. In the newly-issued half-yearly volume of the Royal Agricultural Society's Journal is an important article, the joint production of Professor Jensen, of Copenhagen, and Mr. C. B. Plowright, King's Lynn, which, although dealing chiefly with the prevention of smut in oats and barley, recommends a better way of treating wheat seed corn to prevent bunt than that commonly adopted. The latter disease so thoroughly depreciates the value of a wheat crop, by making the produce unfit for human food, that at the early part of the century the leading agricultural societies, including the Society of Arts, offered heavy premiums for the best preventive. At length it was discovered that steeping the seed in a solution of sulphate of copper destroys so thoroughly the spores of the fungi adhering to the seed corn that by resorting to this means not the slightest apprehension of the pest being propagated need be entertained. This has become so widely known that in all probability the majority of farmers resort to the remedy, for it has become extremely rare to find a sample of wheat affected by bunt offered for sale. Messrs. Jensen and Plowright show, however, in this paper that there is a superior way of treating seed corn, equally effectual in preventing the disease—that of steeping it in heated water of 127° Fah. for five minutes. There is no danger in heating the water up to 133° Fah., which, however, is deemed the maximum limit to be resorted to with safety, and it is thought advisable to keep a little below it. Sulphate of copper, in the quantity generally employed, destroys from 3 to 10 per cent. of the seed corn itself, so it is said, and, as it is believed also to impair the vitality of the young plants springing from the germs which have not been killed, the substitute of hot water steeping is advised. The greater part of the paper, however, deals with an entirely different disease, to which oats and barley, no less than wheat, are liable—that of smut. When fields of grain are nearly ripe, they are often found to have a considerable proportion of blighted, worthless heads, covered with a black substance, deemed by farmers harmless, as it disappears entirely before cutting commences, and the marketable value of the grain in the crop is never affected thereby. In fact, it is a prevalent rural fancy that these smutted, worthless ears afford signs that the wheat-field will yield well, but it is pointed out in this paper that they occasion a certain proportion of loss in the quantity of the grain, and that the disease ought in consequence to be prevented. The same remedy, that of steeping in hot water, is, therefore, recommended for the seed corn of oats and barley, as well as for that of wheat, and it is proved that it will protect barley much better than steeping the seed corn in a solution of sulphate of copper would do.

Some of the local Chambers of Agriculture, at their recent meetings, have been turning their attention to the approaching elections to the County Councils, as it seems only reasonable that they should do. Apparently the country gentry are everywhere presenting themselves as candidates, while tenant farmers, if not apathetic, have as yet entered into no direct organisations to ensure the return of a reasonable number of their class. At the recent meeting of the Warwickshire Chamber, the subject was not only broached but very fully discussed, and the complaint, there made, that the list of candidates that had been set before the ratepayers of the county was far too exclusive, found expression in a resolution which was passed, to the effect that it is desirable that a fair proportion of tenant farmers as well as landlords shall be elected upon the new County Councils. A similar resolution was passed by the Worcestershire Chamber, Mr. J. Essex, who proposed it, stating that he had noticed that in nearly all the local divisions the candidates were, with two or three exceptions, all members of one class, and he did not think that the landlords ought to have the whole representation of the county. Mr. Deakin also spoke of "a cut-and-dried arrangement," and although some speakers deprecated contests on account of expense there was a very general feeling that the present unfolding of things is unsatisfactory. Some of the other local Chambers have also passed resolutions that it is desirable farmers should be represented on the new Board of Agriculture to be established by the Government bill; but this demand received no endorsement at the meeting of the Central Chamber on Tuesday last, when, on the advice of Major Craigie, no opposition whatever was taken to any of the details of the Board of Agriculture Bill, the following resolution being unanimously passed: "That the Council welcomes the introduction of the Board of Agriculture Bill, creating an independent department of agriculture, and urges that the measure should be passed into law during the present session." A resolution was also unanimously passed: "That the Council urges the Government to proceed with the Excise Duties (Local Purposes) Bill, and to pass the same without further delay." Mr. O. D. Johnson, of Ixworth, brought a third subject under the Chamber's attention, connected with national insurance and the promotion of providence or thrift, and it was resolved: "That the subject known as thrift or national insurance should receive the immediate attention of the Legislature." As a proof that the phantom of protection has been effectually laid by the prospect of better times for agriculture, the subject which was placed on the agenda paper and briefly discussed was allowed to drop, no motion being made thereon, which was to "consider the necessity of levying an import duty upon competing foreign imports equivalent in amount to the Imperial and local taxation upon similar home products."

In the discussion on catch crops at the Farmers' Club on Monday several points of interest were elicited, although several of the older members taking part in it maintained that the new management ought to be adopted with caution, being suited for the southern part of the kingdom rather than the northern, where putting in autumn green crops is not popular, owing to the rigour of the winter climate. Mr. F. Street also pointed out one reason why the system is not to be recommended for clay soils. He found in his own experience that the best way to ensure a root crop was to allow the surface to mellow by a winter fallow and employing the scarifier instead of the plough in spring for the destruction of surface weeds. If clay soils were turned over by the plough in spring or early summer, it was often impossible to work them or reduce the clods to a fine tilth. Mr. Clare Read also pointed out that cleanly cultivation is not always associated with rapid cropping, and Mr. Thomas Bell argued that, so far as the North of England is concerned, it is more economical to increase green crops and stock feeding by lengthening the tenure of the alternate grass layer than in any other way. Some telling facts were, however, brought under consideration by Mr. Basil Hodges and others as to the putting in of autumn green crops having been attended with highly advantageous results, and Mr. Herbert Little adverted to a remarkable instance of growing double crops successfully which came under the attention of the judges of the Royal Agricultural Society's farms in the Shrewsbury district. A clay land farmer was accustomed to grow winter beans in rows three feet apart, the intervals being kept well stirred and hoed during spring; but at the period of the last hoeing turnip seed was deposited by a drill in each interval, which caused young plants to spring up, and to yield an excellent crop of roots in the autumn after the beans had been harvested. By this means a second crop was partially grown before the first left the ground, without impairing the latter in the slightest degree, for the judges ascertained that the returns of the bean crop were very considerable. The same farmer, it appears, was accustomed to plant young cabbages between rows of early peas when the latter were grown, that the pods might be marketed, and this, too, turned out a great success. Perhaps it may not be generally known that Mr. Robert Russell, at Horton, in Kent, in ordinary practice, has for several years past been accustomed to sow the seed of thousand-headed kale between his rows of beans and peas when the last horse-hoeing is given in spring, and according to his experience the kale plants are just in a fit condition to be thinned out after the beans and peas are harvested, and almost invariably mature into a valuable crop for sheep feeding in spring.

MONEY MARKET.

SATURDAY EVENING.

Discount rates were again unaltered, at 3 per cent. for three months' bills, but loans till Monday were obtainable at 1, or 4 per cent. below the Bank minimum. A better demand is looked for next week, in connection with the Stock Exchange settlement and the payment of loan instalments; but the effect of these movements will be only temporary, and no real reduction in the supply of money is expected till further large amounts of gold are taken for export. A steamer for Buenos Ayres will leave Southampton on Friday next. On the Continent the inquiry for money is also very moderate, and the return of the Imperial Bank of Germany shows a large reduction in the other securities and note circulation. In Berlin the outside rate of discount is 3¼ per cent., and in Paris 3¾. At St. Petersburg, however, the private quotation is still as high as 7 per cent.

The weekly return of the New York Associated Banks exhibits a decrease of £300,000 in the specie and £280,000 in the legal tenders, making together £580,000, which is the diminution in the reserve. A reduction of £435,000 has also taken place in the surplus, though the total in excess of the legal minimum is still £2,315,000. Net deposits are £580,000 less, and loans and discounts £80,000 down.

Partly in view of the settlement, which will begin on Monday, the stock markets were very inactive. The tone generally was dull, under the influence of the Marquis of Salisbury's speech last night, though the actual decline in prices was unimportant. At the moment there is little or no speculative business, which has been checked by the feeling of uncertainty about gold movements, and investments are also upon a trifling scale. No change occurred in the Funds, while some of the foreign bonds gave way. But except a fall of 1 per cent. in Russian of 1822, Turkish Group One, and Virginia Funded, the alterations did not exceed ⅛ to ⅜. Amongst home railways South-Eastern "A" fell ⅜ per cent., on the issue of a working statement for October with an increase of about £3,600 in the expenditure. Taff Vale, Great Northern Ordinary, and North-Eastern relapsed, but Midland and Brighton "A" were slightly better. American lines exhibited firmness, but the only noteworthy variation was a rise of about ½ each in Northern Pacific Preference and Louisville. Grand Trunks, Mexican Ordinary and Preference, and Nitrate Railway shares improved a little. Argentine railroads were in request, notably Buenos Ayres and Rosario and Central Argentine. Miscellaneous shares were neglected and gas flat. A moderate recovery took place in a few of the mining securities, including De Beers and Tintos. The latter are strengthened by the extent of the "bear" account on the Paris Bourse.

The Moselle, from the West Indies, has brought £34,116 in specie.

Bar silver declined 1-16d, to 43 1-16d per ounce, at which the remittance by the Chilian steamer was sold. The shipments of this metal from New York for Europe during the week have amounted to £31,400. Bombay and Calcutta exchanges were quoted 1s 4 17-32d.

A weaker tendency was reported on the Continental Bourses. At Berlin, Egyptian Unified and some other leading stocks gave way. The Russian rouble was likewise nearly 2 lower. In Paris a decline was apparent in Suez Canal and Lombardo and an advance in Rio Tinto. Three per Cent. Rentes improved 5c, to 82f 92½c, and the Four and a Half per Cents. declined 5c, to 104f 60c. The exchange on London rose ½c, to 25f 31½c.

Some important changes are shown in the return of the Imperial Bank of Germany for the week ending Nov. 7, including a decrease of £1,065,000 in the note circulation and £1,001,000 in the other securities. Bills and public deposits have diminished £726,300; advances on stocks, £560,450; notes of other banks, £68,200; and sundry debtors, £17,300. Cash in hand is also £154,150 less; but sundry securities have increased £34,600; sundry creditors, £5,200; and Treasury Notes £3,050.

In the weekly statement of the Austro-Hungarian Bank notes in circulation exhibit a reduction of £350,500, and other securities £67,700. Silver reserve has likewise decreased £7,600, and gold reserve £1,000; while advances have augmented £8,100, and foreign bills £1,800.

Compared with the previous account, the return of the National Bank of Belgium for the week ending to-day shows a diminution of £781,560 in other securities, £443,840 in current accounts, and £368,800 in notes in circulation. On the other hand, coin and bullion have increased £54,040.

The following official comparative statement of the revenue receipts of the Cape Colony for the quarters ending Sept. 30, 1887 and 1888 respectively, has been received:

MR. W. E. GLADSTONE AT WOLVERHAMPTON.

In consequence of continued interruption, Mr. Gladstone's final speech was brought to an abrupt conclusion at Wolverhampton, on Saturday afternoon, and the meeting, which was attended by upwards of 8,000 persons, broke up in great confusion, many benches being smashed in a rush to the front by enthusiastic Liberals determined to have, at any rate, a good look at their leader. The right hon. gentleman, after the complete rest which he enjoyed on Friday, was in excellent health and spirits on Saturday morning when he rose, and the hoarseness of voice, consequent upon the exertions of the previous four days, had almost entirely gone. Yielding to the pressing representations of the officers of the Wolverhampton Liberal Association, the right hon. gentleman had consented to receive a number of addresses on his way through the town en route to Oxford. Immediately consent had been given the local executive, under the superintendence of Mr. Thomas Graham and Mr. James Adams, exerted themselves in order to make the arrangements as soon as possible, and for the purposes of the meeting the Drill Hall was engaged. No general attempt had been made to decorate the town, but in different parts of the route along which Mr. Gladstone had to pass triumphal arches were erected, containing among the evergreens with which they were adorned words of welcome to the distinguished visitor. Admission to the Drill Hall was solely by ticket, and as early as twelve o'clock the doors of the building were besieged by an eager crowd clamouring for admission, although it was not expected that the chair would be taken before two o'clock. As time wore on the crowd increased to such an extent that it became absolutely necessary to open some of the doors. The ladies were first admitted, and the one gallery in the building was immediately crowded by members of the Women's Liberal Association. The front seats on the floor were also reserved for the use of the fair sex. At ten minutes past one all the doors were opened, the consequence being a wild rush to the front. In a brief space of time the great hall was closely packed. It seemed likely at one period that the front seats, which were utilised as a kind of barrier between the bulk of the audience and the reporters, would be carried away, but fortunately this did not happen. Some of the more eager of the men climbed up to projections on the walls, and supported themselves by clinging to the gas brackets. The platform tickets were specially reserved, and charged for at rates varying from 5s to 10s. During the time of waiting a choir, specially engaged for the occasion, led off a number of political songs set to popular airs.

Mr. Gladstone arrived at the Drill Hall at half-past two. His advent had been delayed for more than half an hour in consequence of the crowded state of the streets. The journey from Wombourne to Wolverhampton was performed in an open landau, drawn by four horses, with mounted postilions. A party of local Liberals drove to Wombourne in a number of large brakes, headed by a brass band, and as soon as the carriages containing Mr. Gladstone and the remainder of the Wombourne party emerged from the lodge gates a procession was formed. In the same carriage with Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone were the Hon. Philip Stanhope, their host, and the Countess Tolstoi (Mrs. Stanhope). Other vehicles contained Lord Ashburnham, Lord and Lady Aberdeen, Sir W. Lawson, M.P., and Sir A. and Lady Hayter. There was no organised demonstration until the suburbs of Wolverhampton were reached; but along the whole of the route which lay within the borough crowds had assembled, the cheering being loud and prolonged. In the immediate vicinity of the Drill Hall a vast concourse of people had gathered, and a large force of police was found necessary to keep the way clear for the procession. A tremendous outburst of cheering from those outside the building heralded the entrance of Mr. Gladstone, and when the right hon. gentleman reached the platform the entire audience rose to their feet. Cheering continued for a considerable period, despite the appeals of the chairman (Mr. H. H. Fowler, M.P.) for silence; and even when this demonstration of enthusiasm had subsided Mr. Fowler had much trouble in making himself heard, owing to the noise at the back of the hall. At last quiet was obtained, and the chairman proceeded with his introductory remarks. He said his duty was very simple. He had in the name and on behalf of the people of Wolverhampton to welcome Mr. Gladstone. (Cheers.) They were proud of the fact that the conflict for the repeal of the Corn Laws was inseparably associated with the life and work and labours of one whom he would still call the member for Wolverhampton—(cheers)—and it was therefore fitting that they in that town, where free trade was cradled, should welcome the last survivor of that great Cabinet which proposed and carried to an end that memorable reform.

The chairman then introduced to Mrs. Gladstone Miss Mander and Mrs. Fowler, who presented, the former a bouquet on behalf of the executive, and the latter an address on behalf of the members of the Wolverhampton Ladies' Liberal Association.

Several addresses were then presented to Mr. Gladstone, who then turned towards the audience for the purpose of replying. For a considerable period the right hon. gentleman was unable to commence his speech, owing to the confusion. There was a tremendous outburst of cheering, the whole of those present again rising to their feet. A further interval elapsed before Mr. Gladstone could make himself heard, mainly on account of the noise in the back part of the hall. At last comparative quiet was restored, and the right hon. gentleman said: You are aware that I have been engaged during the present week in a very pleasurable but also in a very arduous labour. I have been enabled to accomplish—imperfectly, without doubt—the task with which I ventured to offer myself to this your crowded population; and I am very glad—it is to me a matter of particular satisfaction—that the conclusion of these manifestations should be celebrated under the special auspices of your chairman, my valued and most able colleague. (Cheers.) I am quite unable, even if it were desirable upon other grounds, to recommence the business in which I have been engaged. The state of my voice is not such as would in prudence warrant any further effort. (Cheers.) I am obliged to husband the store—the small store—that still remains to me of vigour or efficiency in whatever organ and whatever department, but this I will say—I am in thorough accord with you in respect to the Parliamentary history of Wolverhampton. (Cheers.) Wolverhampton has earned a great name in the conflicts of the last fifty years. There is hardly a borough in the country whose standard has been so high and so consistently upheld and maintained. I earnestly trust that you will find in the next fifty years of the history of Wolverhampton that the borough has distinguished itself in as striking a degree, and that able men, faithful men, may come forward full of sympathy with this population to represent the several divisions of the town in Parliament. (Cheers.) I can do no more than offer you my best wishes that as your past has been so your future may be, and that in this present and in every other controversy you may be allowed to assert for yourselves a large as well as a legitimate share in that birthright of Englishmen, the constitutional freedom which is ever associated with the prevalence of justice and with the granting of equal rights. (Cheers.) Ladies and gentlemen, I thank you. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. Gladstone's opening remarks were heard with tolerable distinctness, but before he had completed his second sentence the noise at the back of the hall was renewed. The interruption appeared to arise from an attempt on the part of the crowd outside to obtain an entrance, the door being forced partially open for that purpose. As the noise increased instead of diminishing there were cries of "Order" from all parts of the building, which added to the confusion. Mr. Gladstone went on for about four minutes, his voice becoming less audible each moment; but, the confusion culminating in complete uproar, he was at last obliged to bring his address to an abrupt termination. Then occurred a scene of disorder seldom witnessed at a political meeting. Those at the back of the hall, mostly working men, pressed forward towards the platform steps, and for a time there was every promise of a panic. The rows of benches which formed the only barrier between the mass of the people in the area and the reporters' table gave way before the onrush, and in a few seconds at least a score of them had been broken to pieces and scattered about the floor. Several women fainted, and those persons nearest the platform swarmed upon it to escape the crush. Fortunately, at the last moment the impending disaster was averted. A couple of dozen sturdy stewards formed in line in front of the barricade of benches, and prevented the crowd reaching the door through which Mr. Gladstone had to pass to the street, and the right hon. gentleman made his way out amid renewed cheering, whereupon the crowd, finding exit through the same channel impossible, fell back, and the pressure was relieved.

From the drill hall to the railway station the cheering was continuous, many thousands of people having assembled to wish the veteran statesman God-speed. No persons were allowed on the platform except those provided with tickets of admission, but during the interval preceding the departure more than one local train deposited a load of passengers, and Mr. Gladstone's saloon was soon surrounded by an eager crowd. It had been arranged that the 3.30 express for Oxford should be caught, but a special saloon carriage was drawn up at a side platform for the accommodation of the visitors, so that they were able to retire at once from public view. Then when the through train arrived the saloon carriage was hitched on. There were repeated cries of "Only one word" and "Bid us good bye," but Mr. Gladstone did not respond with a speech. He remained conversing with Mr. Fowler and others until the train started, and simply bowed his acknowledgments to the continued cheering. Lord and Lady Aberdeen travelled with Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone. As the train steamed out of the station there was a fresh outburst of enthusiasm, which was taken up outside by the crowds who swarmed on the walls and places of vantage overlooking the line. At Wednesbury there was further cheering as the train sped through the station, and at Birmingham, the first stoppage, a considerable crowd had assembled. Mr. Gladstone acknowledged the cheers which were given as he entered and left the station, and spent an interval in conversation with Sir W. and Lady Foster, who were on the platform. Just before leaving Snow-hill a number of people who had assembled at the end of the platform indulged in loud groans as the saloon passed by. Warwick was the next place at which a stop was made, and this was reached at 4.35. A considerable crowd who had obtained admission to the platform immediately rushed up to Mr. Gladstone and gave vent to loud cheers. Several of the more enthusiastic tried to get into the saloon, and it was with difficulty that they were re-reaching Oxford, and there was a similar demonstration. The cheering was general, and before the intrusion could be prevented some half-dozen people rushed into the saloon and endeavoured to shake hands with their chief. They were, however, soon induced to resume their places on the platform. The secretary of the club offered a few words of congratulation, and Mr. Gladstone thanked his admirers by bowing from the window. Sir James Carmichael, who had been travelling in another part of the train, now joined his leader, and a start was made for the last stage at 5.33. Oxford was reached at ten minutes past six, and the reception afforded was very different from that experienced in the earlier part of the journey. A large number of people, the majority of whom seemed to be undergraduates, waited on the platform, and were with difficulty kept back from the exit chosen for Mr. Gladstone's departure. As soon as the train drew up there was a perfect storm of groans and cheers, the former greatly predominating. Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone at once alighted, and, accompanied by Sir James Carmichael, proceeded to the carriage which was in waiting and drove away, followed by renewed hooting and groaning and an occasional cheer.

The right hon. gentleman will be the guest of the Rev. the Warden of Keble College until to-morrow, when he will proceed to London for the remainder of the session. With the exception of the hoarseness to which reference has already been made, Mr. Gladstone does not appear to have suffered in any way from the fatigues of the week, and is extremely pleased with the general reception which has been accorded him during his political campaign in the Midlands.

THE BOARD OF WORKS SCANDALS.

In their interim report on the administration of the Board of Works—a summary of which appeared in The Daily Telegraph of the 7th inst.—the Royal Commissioners, after reviewing the circumstances which led to their appointment, enter at considerable length into the transactions with Mr. Villiers for the letting of the Pavilion site. "The agreement with Villiers," they state, "contained stringent conditions as to the mode in which the entertainments were to be conducted, and the Board had power to appoint a person to inspect and to report whether these conditions were complied with. This duty was entrusted to Mr. Goddard, the chief valuer of the Board. A few months afterwards Mr. Dunch, a surveyor, who was a friend of Villiers and also acquainted with Goddard, stated to Villiers that Goddard expected something for himself. It was accordingly arranged that Villiers should pay Goddard, through Dunch, £50 a quarter, and these quarterly payments were regularly made throughout the whole time that Villiers remained tenant of the old Pavilion building. It is needless to comment at length on so scandalous a transaction. The suggestion that these payments should be made undoubtedly originated with Goddard, who said, according to Dunch, that Villiers ought to give him something for the extra trouble he should have in supervising the Pavilion. Whether this be regarded as the levying of blackmail, or the suggestion of a bribe, it is deserving of the severest condemnation." The Commissioners go on to deal with the later proceedings, which resulted in Villiers acquiring the Pavilion site on terms suggested by Goddard and Robertson, the two last named having a large pecuniary interest in Villiers' tender being accepted. The Commissioners express the opinion that the Board gravely erred in disposing of this important site to Villiers without inviting public competition, and they add: "It is unnecessary for us to characterise the conduct of Goddard and Robertson in relation to the Pavilion site. The transaction carries its own condemnation on the face of it. Their duty was to advise and to assist the Board, to the best of their ability, to obtain the highest possible price for the land that was to be disposed of. Notwithstanding this, they entered into a secret arrangement which made it their direct interest to advise and act in the very contrary direction to that which their duty dictated. A more scandalous breach of their obligation to their employers it is scarcely possible to conceive." With respect to the case of Mr. Hebb, under whose charge were the theatres so far as the Board had jurisdiction over them, and whose correspondence with Mr. Augustus Harris, of the Drury-lane Theatre, and Mr. Hare, of the St. James's Theatre, applying for tickets, has been published, the Commissioners "feel bound to express in unequivocal terms our sense of the impropriety of Mr. Hebb's conduct." As to the share of Mr. Saunders, a member of the Board, in the Pavilion affair, the Commissioners state: "We think it clear that the employment of Saunders as architect was forced upon Villiers much against his will. And we cannot doubt that when Saunders was first approached on the subject of supporting Villiers' application for the site, it was he who raised the question who the architect was to be, and referred to the fact that Isaacs and Florence were representing themselves as the architects. To those who were communicating with him, this could have but one meaning, and was calculated to lead to but one result. And it is difficult to attribute his interest in the question, whom Villiers would employ as his architect, to any but one motive." On the subject of the part taken by Mr. Saunders as to the Grand Hotel and Hotel Metropole sites, they say: "We cannot think it right, either, that Saunders should be found suggesting to the Messrs. Gordon the rental they should offer for the sites on which the Grand Hotel and Hôtel Métropole now stand, with an understanding beforehand that if they obtained the sites he should act as their architect. It is right to state that the sale of the lands in the Northumberland-avenue had hung fire for some time, and Saunders takes credit to himself for having assisted, by his advice to the applicants, in the disposal of them. But he placed himself in a perilous position. His duty was to secure for the Board the highest price that could be obtained. His interest (and that of a very substantial character) was that the terms offered by the Messrs. Gordon should be accepted by the Board." After dealing with the conduct of Mr. Fowler, also an architect and a member of the Board, as to his advice on the Shaftesbury-avenue site, the Commissioners consider the responsibility of the Board generally for the irregularities; and giving full weight to all the circumstances tending in the Board's favour, they are nevertheless impressed with the view that in two respects the Board's proceedings facilitated, even if they did not conduce to, the misconduct disclosed. "Two members of the Board must," they add, "be excepted from the general statement that there were no suspicious circumstances within their cognisance. We refer, of course, to Saunders and Fowler."

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

NOTES AND ANTICIPATIONS.

There are few reasons to think pleasantly of the Liverpool Cup, which ended in such an easy win for Lady Rosebery. The eleventh-hour scratchings of Acme and Ashplant, although an act of compulsion in the case of the Irish horse, raised some bitter feelings, and in few quarters were they allayed by the result. Before the least fancy could be expressed for Lady Rosebery it was requisite to entirely forget her running "across the Border," and there is a wide contrast between the triumph of last Thursday and the defeats sustained from First Fiddler in the Lothians Handicap and Tommy Tittlemouse in the Edinburgh Gold Cup. Fortunately for other owners, a different estimate had been formed of Lady Rosebery in the Manchester November Handicap, and thus with an extra of 10lb she would have all her work cut out to complete the double event that fell to Belphœbe's share ten years ago. In waiting to see how the ground was on the morning of the race the force of circumstances compelled Lord Dudley to be content with a very short price about Fullerton, and as in the Cambridgeshire the early supporters of Bismarck obtained splendid hedging. The tactics adopted with the three-year-old altogether negatived the report that no jockey could hold him behind his horses, and he was given every chance of staying home. If he again kept his Cambridgeshire opponents in check, Fullerton was, in my opinion, very little inferior at the weights, and I shall not despair of seeing Lord Dudley's hitherto expensive purchase carry off an important event. The sport was good at Liverpool from start to finish, and on the first day the victories of Theophilus in the Knowsley Nursery and Bartizan in the Croxteth Cup contained plenty of merit. Another smart performance was that of Juggler, on the second day, in the Stewards' Cup, as Queen of the Dale, to whom he successfully conceded a stone and a year, managed in her turn to account for the Wavertree Welter Handicap, while on Friday one of the unplaced lot, Lisbon, landed the Great Lancashire Handicap, after a desperate fight with Shillelagh. This was the only noticeable reverse sustained by the representatives of Bedford Cottage, and the dangerous character of the stable at Aintree was sustained by Diana, Pericles, Sandal, Windfall, and Toscano. Of the last-named trio Sandal appropriated the Bickerstaffe Stakes and Toscano the Liverpool St. Leger, and this has been an extraordinary season for Lord Calthorpe, as well as for the Duke of Portland. Most of the events under the jurisdiction of the Grand National Hunt came out well, and Gonfalon was quite at his best when he made such a decisive example of his followers in the November Hurdle Handicap. The finish between Magic, The Faun, and Savoyard, for the Sefton Steeplechase proved both close and exciting, and the wearer of the royal colours having lost the tearaway style that characterised him in the Spring, he ought to hold his own fairly well when not asked to travel beyond three miles. Savoyard was far from disgraced, considering the quantity of weight that he tried to give away, and he had a very easy gallop on Friday for the Hapsburg Steeplechase, wherein his single opponent, Meerschaum, took an allowance of 14lb. The Aintree Hunt Steeplechase introduced some smart four-year-olds, and the example set by Cloister will, unless I am mistaken, be copied by more than one of the others during the next four months. The one-day meeting at Alexandra Park closed the week, and Gaillarde having travelled on from Liverpool, where she made no show behind Agnes Hewitt in the Sefton Nursery, she first scored in the Stewards' Welter Plate, and then, with a penalty and overweight combined, vanquished a party of fifteen for the Totteridge Nursery. The Mummer was successful from the same stable, and, as Prince also trained three winners, in Tally Ho, Doric, and Corinia, the spoils of the afternoon were not much divided. So far there has been little inclination to meddle with the Manchester November Handicap, and this apathy will doubtless extend over the interval before the publication of the acceptances. Several of the horses entered have prior engagements, and Goldseeker, Rêve d'Or, Button Park, Lady Rosebery, Martley, and Fallow Chat may be prominently mentioned as figuring in the Derby programme. Between the last-named filly and Lady Rosebery there does not seem much to choose on book form, and should, therefore, Fallow Chat decline the Markeaton Welter at Derby, it will be reasonable to think well of her chance. Goldseeker stands in a very different position to when he won the September Handicap, and is asked to present nearly a stone to the Cesarewitch third, Trayles, and nearly three stone to the feathers of the handicap. With Trayles supposed to have run his last race of the season, the favourable terms upon which he has been handicapped, as compared to many of the horses he met in the Cesarewitch, does not matter. Had he been all right, however, he would have at once extinguished the claims of Rêve d'Or, Button Park, Matin Bell, and Rhythm; and the same might be said of Kenilworth, except that the Malton three-year-old was affected by a slight cough. Taking into question the prominence shown by Kenilworth to the Bushes, he may play a good part at New Barns, and I shall anticipate finding him one of the favourites when the speculation commences. The batch trained by Alec Taylor must be left for the market to sort out, although there is no harm in at once getting rid of Latania, as she wore a racing jacket last week in the Bickerstaffe Stakes and the Liverpool Cup, and was on both occasions tailed off. In the absence of Trayles the chosen candidate from Jewitt's stable might be Zama, whose defeats on hard ground are attributable to weak knees. After a retirement dating back to Ascot, Zama appears to be doing plenty of work, and she has already stayed a mile and a half by dividing Sheen and Stronvar in the Ascot Derby. Except that he would in all likelihood find the course

Buveuse made play, followed by Financier and Jubilee Chief, while next came Petroleum and Happy Returns, and so they ran for a quarter of a mile. Jubilee Chief then assumed the command, attended by Petroleum, Financier, and Tally-ho, with Happy Returns whipping in. When they were a quarter of a mile from home Tally-ho drew up, and soon taking the lead won in a canter by three lengths; a bad third. Antler was fourth, Jubilee Chief fifth, Financier and Petroleum were pulled up.

THE CZAR OF RUSSIA.

REVOLUTIONARY ACTIVITY.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]
ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 11.

I have had an interview with a member of the Russian Revolutionary Party concerning the so-called "accident" to the Czar's train, near Borki. He denies that it was an accident, and declares that it was an attempted assassination, planned by an independent Revolutionary circle.

To my objections that the mishap was almost to be expected, as Borki has always been reported to be a dangerous spot, the sleepers being made of charred and unserviceable wood, and that, moreover, the conspirators naturally would not choose daylight for their murderous work, when it would be so difficult to tamper with the line without being observed, he replied by asking where was the difficulty if the indispensable official connivance was obtainable.

Both as to "accident" and plot my interlocutor undoubtedly was well informed, but I cannot guarantee him incapable of sacrificing truth to politics.

His statement has weight in connection with the letter published on Wednesday in the Moscow Gazette admitting the possibility of an attempted assassination, and accusing Austria of abetting the conspirators.

The Revolutionary Movement is evidently reviving, and I know as an incontrovertible fact that the Party of Action has lately purchased for a large sum a Russian periodical, not to propagate its ideas, but to serve simply as a screen for meetings, consultations, and correspondence.

I shall say more about this matter whenever the periodical is suppressed.

Prince Imeretinsky, President of the Military Tribunal, is designated as the successor of Admiral Possiet in the post of Minister of Ways and Communications.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 11.

The Journal de St. Petersbourg to-day calls attention to the fact that several unfounded reports have lately appeared in foreign newspapers, especially in reference to an alleged warlike speech said to have been delivered by General Gourko. The semi-official organ remarks that to believe and spread such fictions must arise either from great ignorance or bad faith.

In view of the conflicting accounts current with regard to the cause of the Borki accident, the administration of military engineering have despatched to the spot General Petroff, whose high reputation for capacity and integrity will, it is believed, suffice to reassure the public as to the thoroughness and impartiality of the inquiry to be made into the affair.

Count Tolstoi, Minister of the Interior, having returned to St. Petersburg in good health, the Council of the Empire will commence its inquiry into the question of administrative reform about the 20th inst.

UNITED STATES.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]
NEW YORK, Nov. 11.

The Anarchists last evening held a large meeting to commemorate the hanging of their five associates at Chicago. Speeches were made by Most and others, but the police did not deem it necessary to break up the gathering. It is the first meeting permitted for nearly a year.

The wife of Mr. Jay Gould is dying; she can live but a few days.

Yesterday the Chicago and North-Western Railway began a "cut" in rates, and this has produced great excitement, as a general freight-war is anticipated.

Mr. Chamberlain arrived to-day. His wedding with Miss Endicott will probably take place on Thursday at the War-Secretary's private house. Owing to the recent death of the Secretary's father the ceremony will be as private as possible. The President, his Cabinet, and a few relatives only will be invited to be present.

Mr. W. H. Barnum, the chairman of the National Democratic Committee in the recent Presidential campaign, died to-day.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—According to the usual monthly report of the Department of Agriculture, there has been a good season for cotton-picking during October in the south-west, but only a moderately favourable one in the Atlantic Coast States. The wet weather during September was very injurious to the quality of the cotton, prostrating the plants, rotting the bolls, causing blight and shedding, and generally injuring the prospects. The top crop is much stained, and the size and quality are much poorer than last year. The States west of the Mississippi report a larger yield than last year, while Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee indicate a slight reduction. Other States indicate nearly the same expectation.

The returns of the yield of corn indicate a yield per acre quite as large as that of 1885 and larger than any other crop since 1880. The aggregate, grown on a larger area, will exceed any previous product, being close upon 2,000,000,000 bushels. The general average is somewhat under 27 bushels per acre.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—A terrible explosion occurred yesterday in a mine near Pittsburg, Kansas. One hundred and sixty miners were below at the time, and it is feared that all have perished.

A fire broke out yesterday in some steam-gauge and lantern works in Rochester, New York State. A number of the employés attempted to save themselves by jumping from the windows, but twelve of them were killed by the fall and twenty more were injured. Besides these twenty-one persons are reported missing, and it is greatly feared that they are buried beneath the ruins.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—A number of the men who were in the Pittsburg mine at the time of the explosion on Friday last escaped without hurt. The number of those killed is variously estimated at from sixty to 100. Many dead and injured have been brought to the surface. The scenes at the mouth of the shaft, where the relatives and friends of the entombed miners awaited news of their fate, are described as most piteous.

MOZAMBIQUE, Nov. 10.

The Italian cruiser Dogali has left for Zanzibar, where, in accordance with arrangements made by the Italian Government with the British and German Governments, she will co-operate with the English and German war-vessels in establishing a blockade along the East Coast of Africa for the suppression of the slave trade.

ROME, Nov. 10.

In addition to the Dogali, which has been ordered from Mozambique to Zanzibar, another Italian man-of-war will be sent to join in the blockade of the East African coast.

AFFAIRS OF THE PORTE.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 10.—The first through express train from Paris arrived here this evening. It will return to France to-morrow evening.

The negotiations which have been proceeding at the Porte for some time past between the Ottoman and German delegates for the conclusion of a Turco-German Commercial Treaty have been brought to a successful termination. The draft of the new treaty, having been approved by the Council of Ministers, was submitted to the Sultan to-day for his sanction.

The Sultan has conferred the rank of Pasha and General upon Colonel Blunt, of the Imperial Ottoman Gendarmery.

Glasgow International Exhibition closed on Saturday evening, the number of admissions during the day being 117,361. The total number of visitors since it opened on May 8 is five and three-quarter millions, and the money taken at the gates £120,000, exclusive of 45,000 guinea season tickets. It is expected there will be a surplus of £40,000, which will be used for the promotion of science and art in Glasgow.

A popular demonstration has been held at Basle, Switzerland, against the Salvation Army. A resolution was passed to petition the Federal Government to refuse the request of the Salvation Army for permission to erect an assembly hall in the city.

THE EUROPEAN SITUATION.

LORD SALISBURY'S SPEECH.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]
VIENNA, Nov. 11.

The Neue Freie Presse and the Fremdenblatt are the only two newspapers that comment upon Lord Salisbury's speech at the Guildhall. The Neue Freie Presse says it is the first time that a prominent statesman has ventured to raise the question as to whither the ever-increasing armaments of Europe are likely to lead. It proceeds thus:

> The problem is one which pre-occupies everybody—the philanthropist, the economist, and the free-thinker talk of nothing else; but in Government circles they are not fond of discussing it. It cannot be set aside, however; it forces itself irresistibly upon all observers of the feverish competition amongst the Powers in increasing their effective forces. Universal Conscription is every day extended, and before long every able-bodied man will be liable to military service from youth to old age. We seem to be going back to the days when the number of soldiers was equal to the number of men able to carry arms. The prosperity of nations is being slowly but surely ruined by heavy military burdens, and yet every year the Governments demand fresh sacrifices, and claim more money for the Army and more soldiers. The different nations are beginning to ask where it will all lead to.

The semi-official Fremdenblatt says that nobody will doubt Lord Salisbury's assurance as to the English people desiring the maintenance of peace. Everybody knows that England does not intend to attack any of the European Powers; that she honestly wishes to live on the best of terms with them all, and consequently any increase of England's might will necessarily be regarded as fortifying the general peace. "The English nation," observes the Fremdenblatt, "has no interest in a European war, which would damage their trade, nor have they an account to square with any European Power; but, as it is well that the promoters of peace should be strong, it is satisfactory to hear an English statesman speak of the willingness of his country to increase its military strength."

Lord Salisbury's reference to the situation in Lower Egypt, closely followed as it has been by the news of the capture of Wadai by the Mahdists, should dissipate some unhealthy illusions that seem to be entertained at the Porte, and to which the Turkish official organ, the Tarik, has just given expression. That organ demands the prompt evacuation of Egypt by the English. It stupidly attributes the continued anarchy in the Soudan to the British occupation. It even goes so far as to say that the Mahdist Rebellion is nothing else than a protest against the presence of the "foreigner" in Egypt, and that it would subside the very day the English troops left Cairo and Alexandria.

It is announced from Rome that Count Rascon, the Spanish Ambassador to the Quirinal, is to be transferred to Berlin. The Count is an ardent Germanophil, and it is believed that his appointment to Berlin implies considerable political significance. In Rome they expect it will be followed by a rapprochement between Spain and Germany, as the Emperor William, who will do anything to isolate France, wishes to draw Spain as close as possible to the Triple Alliance. The Marquis de Benomar, who is at present Spanish Ambassador in Berlin, was a favourite of the late Emperor Frederick, so that his recall is not surprising.

AGITATION IN SPAIN.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

MADRID, Nov. 11 (3.0 p.m.)—Madrid to-day has been the scene of a serious anti-Conservative demonstration, in connection with the return of Señor Canovas del Castillo from his recent visit to Seville, where his presence also gave rise to political disturbances. It being feared by the authorities that the Conservative leader's return to the capital might be made the occasion for a hostile manifestation, the University students and Republicans having, in fact, arranged for such a display of political feeling, every precaution was taken to ensure the maintenance of order, and a strong police force and detachments of the Civil Guard were posted in the streets leading from the railway station to the ex-Premier's residence. Notwithstanding this, thousands of persons collected at an early hour in the vicinity of the station, the crowd including students, workingmen, street-boys, and numbers of Republicans.

The appearance of Señor Canovas' carriage was the signal for an outburst of hostile cries, the people whistling, hooting, and shouting, and running with every mark of hostility after the equipage, at which stones were thrown, one of the missiles striking Madame Canovas on the shoulder, and another breaking one of the carriage windows. In the Prado and the Strada del Alcala it was found necessary to protect the carriage with a squadron of mounted gendarmes. A great crowd had also assembled before the ex-Premier's residence, where they made similar hostile demonstrations, and Señor Canovas drove to the residence of his father-in-law, the Marquis del Puente Sotomayor.

Great excitement, however, continued to prevail in the city. The streets were thronged all the morning, the crowd, a large proportion of which consisted of the Republican element, collecting in groups and whistling at intervals. Noisy demonstrations were also made before the Conservative Club, the offices of the Conservative newspapers, and the private residences of the Marquis del Sotomayor and other prominent Conservatives. Stones were thrown, and the windows of the office of the Epoca were smashed.

The excitement has now subsided, but the streets are still crowded, although the people are tranquil. A strong force of the Civil Guard and police has been stationed in the streets leading to the residences of Señor Canovas and the Marquis del Sotomayor.

Notwithstanding the uproar in the streets, no fighting occurred, the police and Civil Guards dispersing the people quietly and with very little difficulty.

MADRID, Nov. 11 (7.30 P.M.)—After an interval of tranquillity the demonstration re-commenced between four and five o'clock. Groups of people assembled before the Conservative Club and other places, whistling and shouting, and the police with difficulty induced the people to move on. After a time it was judged expedient to close the club, as the conduct of the demonstrators began to assume a more actively hostile character.

Shortly afterwards the Republican journal Pais appeared with a notification, signed by a number of students, declaring that they made the manifestations to-day with the object of proving their adherence to the energetic protest made by their companions in Seville, Saragossa, and Barcelona against the lamentable days of November, 1884, when the disturbances at Madrid University were repressed by the Conservative authorities.

The Epoca came out at the same time with an article headed "In Open Revolution." It said that the rioters had been crying "Long live the Republic!" "Long live Zorilla!" before the houses of Señor Canovas and other former Ministers, and also before the residence of Count Casa Miranda. The latter came on to the balcony and confronted the crowd, asking them what they wanted. "Death to the Conservatives!" was the reply. The Count then invited the leader to come into his house; but this proposal was not accepted.

At the present hour the popular excitement appears to be quite unallayed, and the streets are thronged with noisy people. Some of the demonstrators have been publicly burning Conservative newspapers.

In answer to a question put to him in the course of the day as to the character of the demonstration, Señor Canovas said: "It is directed against the Monarchy, which I defend."

Our Berlin correspondent telegraphed last night: "The Czarewitch will pass through Berlin this week en route for Copenhagen, to be present at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the King of Denmark's accession to the throne. His Imperial Highness will not stop here on his journey, but is expected to make a short halt on his return through the German capital."

It is stated that the number of foreign residents in Paris who have registered their names at the Prefecture of Police now amounts to 124,000.

Yesterday the closing of the Brussels Exhibition took place, in the presence of the Count of Flanders, Prince Baudouin, and several Ministers and official personages. Among the gentlemen who received orders in recognition of their services are Mr. Lee Bapty, the Commissioner-General of the British Section, who received the rank of Officer of the Order of Leopold; Mr. Bigelow, President of the United States Section, who was made a Commander of the Order; and Mr. MacFarland, Secretary to the American Section, who was created a Chevalier of the same Order.

On Saturday the remains of Count Robilant, the late Italian Ambassador to the Court of St. James', were taken to Turin and conveyed with much solemn pomp to their last resting-place. The coffin, covered with wreaths, was laid upon a gun-carriage, which was drawn by six horses and escorted by a detachment of troops. The funeral procession comprised, besides the members of Count Robilant's family, representatives of the King and the principal dignitaries of State and some working men's associations.

On account of the success which has attended the Russian colonisation of the Oussouri Valley, Baron Korff, Governor-General of the Amoor Province, has proposed to the Russian Government to promote the development of the colony by granting to private individuals long leases of State lands situated on the banks of the Oussouri.

Dated Cairo, Nov. 10, a Reuter's telegram says: "A battalion of black troops now stationed at Assouan has received orders to proceed to Suakin."

RIFLE CHAMPIONSHIP.—On Saturday at the Rainham Ranges, Essex, the prominent rifle shots of the City of London Volunteer Regiments competed for the Gold Badge of the City of London Rifle Association and the rifle championship. The weather was fine, and as a result the entries were large, and some excellent scores made. The competition was decided by an aggregate of two "shoots" at Queen's First Stage distances, one in the spring and the other on Saturday. At the close of the contest Sergeant J. J. Keliher, of the London Rifle Brigade, was declared the winner with the fine aggregate of 183 points—90 and 93—his Saturday's "shoot" comprising 33 at 200 yards, 33 at 500 yards, and 27 at 600 yards. The Silver Badge was taken by Sergeant Tayton, London Rifle Brigade, with 180 (90 and 90), and the Bronze Badge by Private Elkington, London Rifle Brigade, 177 (91 and 86).

NEWS FROM VIENNA.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]
VIENNA, Nov. 11.

The twenty-one miners whose lives were reported to have been lost at the Salgo-Tarjan Colliery in Hungary on Thursday last, were rescued yesterday afternoon. Ever since the accident occurred the inhabitants of Salgo-Tarjan had worked day and night at the construction of a passage thirty mètres in length, taking the direction in which it was supposed the miners had attempted to escape. Efforts were also made to reach the interior of the mine through the shaft, but foul gas prevented an approach. After sixty-three hours' labour the work of rescue was crowned with success. Access was gained to a gallery, where the missing men were discovered on the verge of suffocation. It is believed that they could not have survived another three hours, many of them being too weak to move.

VIENNA, Nov. 10.

It is announced this evening by the Political Correspondence that the Empress Elisabeth will return to Vienna in December, and that the rumour published by certain foreign papers that her Majesty, acting under the advice of her physicians, was about to undertake a sea voyage to India or America, is completely unfounded.

Corn opened slightly stronger and ⅛c up. The market continued fairly active on "shorts" coming in to cover. There was a fair demand from exporters, and the closing is steady, with values unchanged to slightly dearer. The Government report estimates the yield at somewhat under 27 bushels per acre and a total crop of about 2,000,000,000 bushels.

Sales, futures, 464,000 bushels; spot, 134,000 bushels. Receipts, 90,000 bushels; same day last year, 100,730. Clearances, 10,000 bushels.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The first competition for the Macfarren Scholarship (founded by subscription in memory of the late principal, Professor Sir G. A. Macfarren) will take place on Jan. 16, 1889. This scholarship is tenable for three years, and open to British-born male or female candidates between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one, and will be awarded for the most promise in musical competition.

A USEFUL HINT.—If British housekeepers, instead of purchasing the commonest of common matches, because they are low priced and thought to be cheap, would use none but matches bearing Bryant and May's name, they would not only get the best value for their money, but would enable Bryant and May to pay thousands of pounds more weekly in wages; and in that way the British housekeepers would be doing real good to the working classes of the East-end of London.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

Sealskin Garments and Ladies' Furs at half-price. Alaska sealskin Battenbergs, £4, £5, and £6 each; sealskin paletots, from £8, half-price. Gents' fur-lined coats, £5 and £6. An immense quantity of boas and all kinds of furs, carriage and hearth rugs, fur-lined cloaks, to be sold regardless of cost.—Phillips' City Fur Warehouses, 32, 34, Newgate-st., our only address.—[ADVT.]

DEATH OF THE EARL OF LUCAN.

On Saturday afternoon Field-Marshal the Earl of Lucan breathed his last, after a long illness, at his town residence in South-street, Park-lane. He was born on April 16, 1800; was educated at Westminster School, where the present Earl of Albemarle was his contemporary; entered the army in 1816; and was elected as Conservative member for the county of Mayo in 1826, retaining his seat until 1830. In him passes away one of the few members who sat in the House of Commons before the great Reform Bill of 1832, of whom there are still ten survivors left, namely: Viscount Eversley, born in 1794, and elected for Downton, in Hampshire, in 1830; Lord Ebury, born in 1801, and elected for Shaftesbury in 1822; General the Hon. A. C. Legge, uncle to the present Earl of Dartmouth, and elected for Banbury in 1825; Viscount Portman, born in 1799, and elected for Dorsetshire in 1823; Earl Grey, born in 1802, and elected for Winchilsea, in 1826; Lord Cottesloe, born in 1798, and elected for Buckingham in 1827; Lord Winmarleigh, born in 1802, and elected for Lancashire in 1830; the Duke of Devonshire, born in 1808, and elected for Cambridge University in 1829; Sir Hugh Owen Owen, Bart., born in 1803, and elected for Pembroke Boroughs in 1826; and Mr. Christopher Rice Mansel Talbot, born in 1803, and elected member for Glamorganshire in 1830, which seat he has retained ever since, being now Father of the House of Commons.

Prior to the great Reform Bill the duties of a member of Parliament appear not to have been very onerous, as the Earl of Lucan, then Lord Bingham, escaped from them in 1828, and obtained permission to serve on the Staff of General Diebitsch, who commanded the Russian army which fought in that year against the Turks in Bulgaria. Lord Bingham succeeded to the title of Earl of Lucan on the death of his father in 1839, and was chosen to be an Irish representative peer in 1840. In June, 1829, he married Lady Anne Brudenell, seventh daughter of the sixth Earl of Cardigan, by whom he had two sons, both of whom survive him, and four daughters, all of whom have passed away. Two of his daughters died unmarried, and the eldest of the other two, Lady Augusta Bingham, married the present Lord Alington in 1853, and died during the present year; while her younger sister, Lady Lavinia Bingham, married the present Viscount Hardinge in 1856, and died in 1864. Much of Lord Lucan's time was passed, after his succession to the title, at his Irish home, The Lawn, Castlebar, County Mayo, where he devoted himself with great energy and, it must be added, much sagacity to improving the agriculture of a district in which he owned 30,000 acres, some of it being very good land, although not equal to his small English estate at Laleham, near Staines, where, in the good days of farming, his meadows on the Middlesex bank of the Thames were let at an extraordinary price per acre. Some of them he retained in his own hands, and brought over Irish store cattle from Mayo, which he fattened at Laleham and sold at a great profit. Laleham House, his seat in Middlesex, is a plain, square, modern mansion, with a Tuscan portico, and noted for its pleasant grounds of forty acres, studded with noble elms, shrubberies, and flower gardens. Donna Maria, Queen of Portugal, resided for some time during her minority at Laleham House in 1829 and 1830.

The Crimean war, which broke out in 1854, afforded to Lord Lucan the great opportunity of his life. He was then fifty-four years old, but with the vigour, courage, and energy of a man of thirty. His reputation as a cavalry officer obtained for him the command of the cavalry division in the Crimea, and he took part in the battles of the Alma on Sept. 20, of Balaclava on Oct. 25, when he was slightly wounded, and of Inkermann on Nov. 5, 1854. It was at the Battle of Balaclava that the charge of the Light Brigade took place—that famous charge in connection with which oceans of ink have since been shed, and which remains to this hour an inexplicable mystery about which we know little more than that, in the Poet Laureate's words, "some one had blundered." On the morning of Oct. 25, 1854, 12,000 Russians, under General Liprandi, attacked and took a redoubt in the vicinity of Balaclava, manned by about 300 Turks. The victorious Russians then assaulted the British position, and were driven back and severely handled by the heavy cavalry under Sir James Scarlett. At this critical moment an order, supposed to have emanated from Lord Raglan, but communicated through Lord Lucan to his brother-in-law, Lord Cardigan, was delivered to the latter by Captain Nolan, who added a few contemptuous words of his own when Lord Cardigan appeared to hesitate about complying with Lord Raglan's order to charge the Russian army, which had re-formed on its own ground with heavy masses of artillery in its front. Unfortunately, Lord Lucan and Lord Cardigan were not on speaking terms, and, instead of sending Captain Nolan back to Lord Lucan, requesting him to repeat the order under circumstances which Captain Nolan should have been instructed to explain, Lord Cardigan, too proud to communicate with his brother-in-law, proceeded to lead his Light Cavalry regiments against the serried ranks of the Russians. Then followed that splendid but useless display of valour concerning which the French Commander-in-Chief remarked, "C'est magnifique, mais ce n'est pas la guerre"; and of which the present Sir George Wombwell, who took part in it and was among the few survivors, is now one of the oldest living chroniclers. Captain Nolan, although a staff officer, who had no business to engage in the fray, joined in the charge of the Light Brigade, and was killed by a round shot at the head of those gallant horsemen. They went into action 670 strong, led by Lord Cardigan on his magnificent thoroughbred charger, but of them no more than 198 returned. It is one of the proudest achievements of the British cavalry that, although "Cannon to right of them, cannon to left of them volleyed and thundered," they made great havoc among the enemy, and the only wonder is that any of Lord Cardigan's indomitable followers should have escaped death or capture. Banquets have again and again been given by their admiring fellow-countrymen to the survivors of that glorious day, and notably, one which took place at the Alexandra Palace on the anniversary of the Battle of Balaclava in 1875. The death of Captain Nolan, who had conceived the most exalted ideas of the capacity of cavalry, removed the witness who might have thrown most light on the transactions of that memorable passage of arms, and to this hour we know little more about it than that there were blunders all round.

After the Crimean war, Lord Lucan returned to England, and was made Colonel of the 8th Hussars, which post he retained until 1865, when he became colonel of the 1st Life Guards. He was made a Lieutenant-General in 1858, General in 1865, and Field-Marshal in 1887. In addition he was a Commander of the French Legion of Honour, Knight of the Turkish Medjidie, and Knight of St. Anne of Russia. To the younger generation of Englishmen who have arisen since the Crimean war, he was chiefly known as presenting one of the most astonishing instances of vigour in his green old age that these islands could exhibit. White's Club, which he frequented, rang with stories about him which might have been told of a man in his glorious youthful prime, and he will be greatly missed in the metropolitan haunts where his familiar face and figure were best known.

Lord Lucan is succeeded in the title by his eldest son, Lord Bingham, born in 1830, who served in the Crimea as aide-de-camp to his father, sat as Liberal-Conservative member for Mayo from 1865 to 1874, and married, in 1859, Lady Cecilia Gordon-Lennox, youngest daughter of the fifth Duke of Richmond. The late Lord Lucan had long been Lord-Lieutenant of the county of Mayo.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY.—The first meeting of this society since the recess was held on Saturday, Mr. J. P. Gassiot, vice-president, in the chair. Among other exhibits upon the table were plants of abrus precatorius, the so-called "Weather Plant." The secretary, in explaining the action of the plant, said he could not do better than quote the late Michael Faraday, who, during a lecture on table-turning, remarked that effects noticed were often incorrectly attributed to a certain cause—thus, the movement of the table was ascribed to some mesmeric influence rather than to the unconscious mechanical act of the operator, and thus the action of the weather plant was put down to atmosphere or other influences at a distance of time or place rather than that of the immediate habitat in which the plant might be at the moment. The behaviour of the weather plants in the society's gardens varied at one and the same time according to the special conditions under which they were growing.

"The New Catalogue of the Midland Counties Watch Company is a notable illustration of the growth to really marvellous dimensions of a new idea in trade. It claims to be the pioneer in its own line of the wholesome principle which brings the producer into direct contact with the customer; and it has evidently advanced by leaps and bounds. It now requires no fewer than a thousand copper-plate engravings to represent a portion of the articles they supply—watches, jewellery, and electro-plated goods. One obvious advantage secured by getting this catalogue is the opportunity of making a leisurely and careful selection. The designs are often extremely beautiful; and the thousand unsolicited testimonials included in the volume testify to the excellent quality of the articles. Any of our readers who desire to procure a copy of the catalogue will have it sent to them gratis and post free by any part of the world on writing to the manager, Mr. A. Percy, Vyse-street, Birmingham."—Christian Leader, Nov. 10, 1888.—[ADVT.]

PRINCESS'S THEATRE.

Mr. Henry Pettitt is faithful to his old melodramatic loves. After long years of constancy he cannot free himself from the fetters of the seductive foreigner and the French windows; after an industrious and useful career the author of a hundred dramas is as true as steel to his good old friend "Jonathan Bradford." He may cast a glamour of colonial brotherly feeling over his clever "pot-boilers," he may endeavour to bind England and Australia still closer together with "Hands Across the Sea," he may make-believe that he has touched a new chord of sentiment, and worked out the simplest problem in an entirely new way; but for the life of him he cannot keep his heroine free from the clutches of the irrepressible foreigner, who thinks that every woman must yield to him; and it would be a positive miracle if a drama to which Mr. Pettitt's name was attached did not contain a virtuous hero who, suddenly confronted with a dead body, is as promptly accused of murder. After all, we must not be too hard on Mr. Pettitt. Artists in other walks of life have their marked manner and unalterable idiosyncrasies. We can tell a Leighton by the peach-blossom complexion, a Tadema by the veined marble, an Orchardson by a canvas empty in the middle, and a Marcus Stone by a couple of last-century French lovers sitting under or wandering away from a convenient tree or a deserted terrace of an old château. Why wonder that we know a Sims by a street-boy, a Grundy by a shameless ecclesiastic, and a Pettitt by an accusing corpse? He cannot get rid of it. It haunts him, as did the head of the Martyr of blessed memory our old friend Mr. Dick. In his last drama, produced on Saturday night, Mr. Henry Pettitt has performed a series of melodramatic gymnastics and constructional somersaults. He has written a five-act drama, with the first act, which is a play in itself, with a beginning, a middle, and an ending that require no further explanation, addition, or expansion; he has coquetted with the seductive foreigner, the French windows, and the convenient balcony in acts two and three; he has, in the fourth act, given perhaps the best dramatic work that he has invented or arranged for a considerable period; whilst the wind-up of the story is about as clumsy and cheap as the work that has preceded it is good and sound.

Jack Dudley, in the bright and genial person of Mr. Henry Neville, whose long service on the stage has not deadened his vivacity or crushed his spirits, appears in the first act as an aristocratic carter. He flourishes a wagoner's whip and walks about the farm in light-brown seaside boots. Honest Jack, who has the breezy air of a skipper out for a holiday who has taken to farming for a spree, is naturally the soul of honour, and—equally as a matter of course—he is in love with his master's ward. Now, the master in question is a stingy old reprobate who has squandered the girl's income, believing that her father in Australia will never return to make him give an account of his stewardship. Unluckily for this old scamp—it is seldom that farmers cease to be virtuous on the stage—the father turns up in the nick of time to prevent the genial carter from being sent about his business, and the girl from being handed over to a flashy villain. As Jack Dudley has been enriched by a fortunate speculation, as he has won the girl of his heart, as the Australian father has returned, as vice has triumphed and villany has been deposed, there is really nothing more to be done. The play is over; but Mr. Pettitt elects to go on with it. Robert Stillwood, the Paris-haunting villain, lures poor Jack Dudley to his doom. Honest Jack is all very well down in Devonshire with a carter's whip, but he is a mere baby in the salons of the Parisian aristocracy. His life becomes a burden to him. So soon as his good, virtuous wife is left alone for a minute some fascinating foreigner is certain to enter by the French windows to tempt her. So sure as he plays cards some one gets the best of this sensible and hard-headed young man from the country.

We may pause here to examine the curious problem propounded by the modern dramatist. Why should a perfectly pure, honourable, and straight-laced English lady be supposed to be the prey of the basilisk foreigner? What is there in the deadly gaze of the Russian or Frenchman that is supposed to make innocent women fall at their feet? We may remind Mr. Pettitt and his brother dramatists that the heroines of "Nos Intimes" and the "Maison Neuve," and scores of similar plays, if not guilty were at least imprudent. They gave their impetuous admirers—even innocently—some sort of encouragement. But for a man to tempt an absolutely pure and orthodox woman simply because he is a foreigner, and to attempt his guilty designs simply because there happen to be an outside balcony and a French window, is to misstate a dramatic case. Sardou may have made mistakes, but he does not make so silly a one as that.

However, the wily Count enters, he starts the absolutely ridiculous temptation which is supposed to be the ruling passion of foreigners fascinated by balconies and French windows, and, of course, before he allows the injured innocent to pass the husband comes in and demands satisfaction. He does not get it there, but the Devonshire carter remembers his old prowess in a gambling saloon, and knocks down the Count as if he were a ninepin. When, therefore, the aforesaid Count is murdered by two scoundrels for the money he has won at gaming, it is easy enough to fix the crime on Jack Dudley, who comes up in the nick of time and is found kneeling over the corpse of his deadly enemy. It is inevitable. Jonathan Bradford is too powerful to be resisted. He is as vigorous as ever he was in assisting the authors of "Taken from Life" and "The Silver King." Mr. Pettitt's new hero does not go to Clerkenwell to be blown up and saved in an explosion of dynamite. He is taken, instead, to La Roquette, where he is condemned to die, overpowers a whole army of warders and gendarmes, seizes a sword, fights for his life, and is about to be shot as he is scaling a wall, when his wife rushes in waving a reprieve! Once more, surely, the play is over. Not a bit of it. Mr. Pettitt knows how to prolong the agony. Jack Dudley is preserved from the guillotine, but he is packed off to New Caledonia, and by a miracle of miracles, unheard-of since the days of Monte Cristo, he escapes in an open boat, and is picked up by the very English steamer which by the strangest of coincidences is taking his wife and all his enemies over to Australia. The scene on the deck of the Australasian is the best in the play. By a desperate effort the author wholly revives the interest. The scene between the husband and wife, who recognise but dare not betray one another, the demand of the captain of the French cruiser for the body of the escaped prisoner, the plucky effort of the English captain to strain international law in favour of the fugitive, are all worthy of a far better play. If all had been up to this level, it would have been one of the best of Mr. Pettitt's melodramas. But he can take heart; he can use the incidents again in another form, and no one will be a bit the wiser. After this consistency and probability are blown to the winds. No human mind can grasp the conflicting ideas. Why Jack Dudley, within a few hours of landing at Sydney, should suddenly change from a slouching, shipwrecked seaman into a gallant, well-fed, sunburnt captain of a Thames steamer, and why at the port of Sydney the most complicated laws of extradition and disputed points of evidence should be settled without any legal formality on the open quay, are points that the author must decide. The hands of the clock are pointing to eleven, and Mr. Henry Neville must be proved innocent somehow or other. He might go back to New Caledonia, and the author is quite capable of starting a fresh vein of interest on the very shores of Australia and across the sea to which our hands are stretched. But the knot is conveniently cut with the aid of compromising bank-notes, and a convict who unburdens himself of the guilt of the murder and dies in a fit. With the vigorous assistance of Mr. Robert Pateman the play ends with a sharp spasm of excitement. The epilepsy of the convict is well simulated, and for a few seconds Mr. Pateman contrives to hold the house.

Acting of any special moment could scarcely be found in so formal and unreal a drama. Mr. Henry Neville, with his pleasant, convincing style and his melodious voice, is the very hero for such a play. He works as only an old actor can work, and sets an example to the drawling, invertebrate, and namby-pamby school. He gets out of his work every drop of juice that can be squeezed from it, and the drama lives when he is on the stage. Miss Mary Rorke, the earnest heroine, works just as loyally, and helps the author at every turn. The style of Mr. Willard is evidently fascinating to the young actor, and it is natural that it should suggest itself to Mr. W. L. Abingdon on this stage; but a new and original type of villain would be a treat. The comic duet was capitally done by Mr. E. W. Garden and Miss Webster, who played with uncommon spirit; and good service was rendered by Mr. Julian Cross, a sturdy old Australian; by Mr. Bucklaw, who tried to be natural as an impossible foreigner; by Mr. H. H. Morell, as a comic American; by Mr. Philip Darwin, the French naval officer; and specially by Mr. Edmund Gurney, the ship's captain, a natural, useful, and effective performance.

No signs were given that the play was otherwise than very successful. The calls were incessant, the author was summoned to be applauded as an old and faithful friend, and those whose memories are not very retentive may find excitement yet in "Hands Across the Sea."

Advices received at Auckland (New Zealand) state that on the 23rd ult. the boats of the German gunboat Adler fired on a party of Samoans at Apia. Some of the bullets penetrated the houses, and the Europeans have protested against the action of the German commander as being a violation of neutral territory. Tamasese's party have erected a stronghold at Atna, where a decisive battle is expected.

On Friday the traffic receipts of the Suez Canal amounted to 240,000f, against 320,000f on the corresponding day of last year.

WAR PROSPECTS.—On Saturday evening Major-General Brackenbury, C.B., Chief of the Intelligence Department of the War Office, addressing the 2nd Middlesex Artillery Volunteers, at the Cannon-street Hotel, on the occasion of the regimental prizes being presented, said that he had only just returned from a long journey in search of information for his department. He had visited many of the great capitals of Europe, and had seen many of the men who are now making history; and he regretted that the impression he brought back was that the peace of Europe could not be greatly prolonged. Whenever war should arise it appeared to him impossible for England to avoid being drawn in, and then the volunteers must be called upon to bear their part in great events. The General next referred to the withdrawal of the volunteer clauses from the Defence Act passed this year, and regretted that this step had been taken. In this he had been obliged to differ with the distinguished soldier (Sir E. Hamley) who was at the head of the 2nd Middlesex; but, much as he deplored this, he felt that those clauses must be reintroduced, for it was impossible to wait for volunteer mobilisation until the enemy's ships were in sight.

DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE AND THE VOLUNTEERS.

On Saturday afternoon the Duke of Cambridge opened the new drill-hall of the 2nd City of London Rifles, which has been erected in the Farringdon-road, near the Metropolitan Railway Station. The new building has cost nearly £4,000. His Royal Highness was accompanied by General Lyon-Fremantle, General Gipps, C.B., and other officers of the Headquarters and London District Staff, and there were present to receive the Commander-in-Chief the Lord Mayor, Mr. Sheriff Newton, Colonel the Hon. W. S. Home, Grenadier Guards, General Dodgson, C.B., Colonel Laurie, C.B., and a large number of other officers and friends. The regiment received his Royal Highness with a royal salute, and the proceedings were at once opened by Colonel Cantlon, the commanding officer, who, in the course of his address, traced the history of the volunteer organisation, and specially that of the 2nd London Rifles. From two companies the regiment now stood with an enrolled strength of 860, of whom 816 were efficient. The colonel alluded to the honour which had been conferred upon it by that distinguished soldier General Sir F. Roberts, who had accepted the honorary colonelcy, to the difficulties against which the regiment had to contend for over a quarter of a century in finding drill-grounds, and said that in the erection of the magnificent drill-hall in which the regiment was then for the first time on parade they had received the utmost support from the ex-Lord Mayor. In conclusion, Colonel Cantlon said that, if justification were needed for asking his Royal Highness to open the drill-hall, it was to be found not only in the keen interest the Commander-in-Chief had always taken in the volunteer force, but also in the knowledge he possessed of the work of each particular corps, in his constant watchfulness of their progress, in the kindly but necessary checking of their errors, in the hearty encouragement of their improvement, and in his devoted service to Queen and country. (Cheers.)

The Duke of CAMBRIDGE, who was received with enthusiasm, said he had great satisfaction in being present to open the well-built and useful hall provided by the corps, as he always wished to identify himself with the magnificent volunteer force which in this country formed so large a portion of the defensive power. He had often heard lately that he was adverse to the volunteers—the colonel of the 2nd London did not appear to be of that opinion—and he was staggered by the idea. It happened that, in the position held by him (his Royal Highness), he had often taken views which were not in accordance with those of others; he did not agree with everything that was suggested, but it should not be supposed from that that he was adverse to the volunteers; on the contrary, he admired them as much or more than any other man. If he had differed in opinion it had been in the interest of the volunteers and with the motive to improve them and make them more efficient. He desired to see the force fit to take its place in the defence of the country; and if things had gone on in the past without care the volunteers could not now present such an appearance as that shown by the corps then present. This was, he believed, because the volunteers had been under the watchful eye of himself and those who assisted him. No man had so strong a feeling towards the force as he had, and nothing he could do to support its interests and efficiency, while so splendid a spirit pervaded all, would be wanting. Conscription had been avoided in this country because in it were young men always ready to come forward, filled with devotion to the Sovereign, to defend the interests of the Empire. In this spirit it was to be hoped the volunteers might always continue, free of bias or political feelings. (Prolonged cheers.) He rejoiced to see the City of London represented on that occasion by the Lord Mayor, who only entered upon his office the previous day, and thus so early showed his interest in the volunteers. The presence of his lordship foreboded good, and his Royal Highness was sure the City would do everything in its power to assist in increasing the efficiency and usefulness of the force. The necessity of going to the targets was impressed upon the volunteers by the Duke, who said that ours was a difficult climate, but the drills must go on; and, therefore, to provide such a drill-hall as that was a positive necessity, and the money it cost was well laid out. Other corps ought to follow the example, for it was an admirable one, and he had never seen a hall more suitable for its purpose or better arranged. He congratulated the colonel and the regiment on having succeeded so well, and, as there was still some remaining debt, he appealed to the Lord Mayor and those who supported him to support the volunteers in this matter, and was sure his lordship would be seconded by his fellow-citizens. (Cheers.) His Royal Highness was glad to state, from a little telltale in his possession, that the 2nd London was in every point improving, and as the progress so far had been gradual they might be convinced it would not stop. He had been glad to see the corps and the hall, and also to have had the opportunity of showing the force at large how much interest he took in it, and how greatly he desired its welfare and prosperity. (Cheers.)

His Royal Highness, before leaving the platform, presented medals for long service and good conduct in the army to Sergeant-Major Styles and Sergeant Harrison, congratulating the recipients in a few soldierly words, and then inspected the building before leaving.

The LORD MAYOR subsequently presented the prizes, the principal items in the list being the handsome challenge bowl given by Sir Frederick Roberts, V.C. (Honorary Colonel), and won by Colour-Sergeant Fortunati, and the gold medal won by Private Shand. His Lordship afterwards addressed the corps, asserting a warm personal interest in the force, and expressing the opinion that those who, like himself, did not give actual service, should assist in other ways, and especially by seeing that the volunteers had all that was necessary for them. It was well known that he had already expressed certain opinions in regard to the provision of funds for completing the equipment of the corps within the metropolitan area, and if, after due inquiry, this purpose should seem desirable, the matter would be brought forward at a proper time. (Cheers.)

The proceedings then terminated.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

Probate of the will, dated July 20, 1887, of the late Mr. Alexander Suter, of Harrison-road, Halifax, solicitor, who died on Aug. 29 last, has been granted to the executors, his wife, Mrs. Annie Suter, and Mr. Benjamin Whitehead Jackson, of Halifax, by whom the value of the personal estate has been declared at £1,829 0s 6d, and the testator gives all his property to his said wife.

The will, dated April 24 last, of the late Mr. William Leggoe, of Normandy Villa, Moorgate, Rotherham, who died on April 30, has been proved by the executors, his wife, Mrs. Eliza Leggoe, and the Rev. William Blazeiy, to each of whom, as executor, the testator bequeathes £20, and to his said wife for her life the use of his furniture and household effects, and the income of all his residuary estate, from which, on her decease, £1,000 is to be paid to his daughter, Florence Alice, who is also to take the household effects. The ultimate residue of his property is to be held in trust to his wife's appointment in favour of their children, Florence, Alice, Albert, and Alfred, the value of the personalty being £3,902 17s 5d.

Probate of the will, dated Jan. 2, 1886, of the late Mrs. Hannah Pottomley, of Greenfield, Bramley, Yorkshire, who died on July 15 last, has been granted to the executors, John William Turner and Sarah Turner, and the testator bequeathes £50 each to Elizabeth Emma Dickinson and Rebekah Turner, and exercises power of appointment over the Whitecoate Hill estate in favour of James, Joseph D., John Wm., Henry D., and Sarah Turner, and devises adjoining property to the use of her sister, Elizabeth Barker, for life, and on her decease to Richard Musgrave and Samuel Dickinson, Mary Hannah Stevenson, Elizabeth Emma Dickinson, and the five above-named members of the Turner family. All the residue of her estate, real and personal, is left to the said Sarah Turner, and the personalty has been valued for probate at £556.

Viscount de San Januario, Portuguese Minister of War, has resigned his post. It is rumoured that he will be replaced by General Castro.—Reuter.

Mr. Gerald Loder, who has recently been appointed private secretary to Mr. Ritchie, President of the Local Government Board, is the fourth son of the late Sir Robert Loder, of Beech House, Worthing, and Wittlebury, Northamptonshire. He is a member of the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple, and is an M.A. and LL.B., of Cambridge University. Mr. Loder has entered upon his duties at Whitehall.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, as President of the Board of Trade, has presented to the House of Commons a report by the labour correspondent of the Board of Trade as to the condition of the nail makers and small chain makers in South Staffordshire and East Worcestershire.

A bill to repeal certain parts of the Act for better paving, improving, and regulating the streets of the metropolis and removing and preventing nuisances and obstructions therein, has been laid on the table of the House of Commons in the joint names of Mr. Atherley-Jones, Mr. Forrest Fulton, Mr. Bradlaugh, Sir John Colomb, Mr. Pickersgill, and Mr. O. V. Morgan.

An additional number of obsolete vessels of war now in the Reserve at Chatham are ordered by the Admiralty to be broken up. They include the Hood, line of battle ship, the Encounter, and the Albatross.

THE POPLAR MURDERER.—On Saturday Mr. J. E. Waters, solicitor, who defended Levi Richard Bartlett, who was, at the last sitting of the Central Criminal Court, sentenced to be hanged, had a lengthy interview with Mr. Murdoch, at the Home Office, with reference to a commutation of the capital sentence. Mr. Waters afterwards received the following communication from Whitehall: "Sir—I am directed by the Secretary of State to inform you, with reference to the petition submitted by you in favour of Levi Richard Bartlett, who is lying under sentence of death, that he has had this case under his careful consideration, but he regrets that he has not been able to find any sufficient ground to justify him in advising her Majesty to interfere with the due course of the law.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, GODFREY LUSHINGTON." Bartlett will, therefore, be hanged to-morrow morning, at eight o'clock.

THREATENED STRIKES.—A meeting of the workmen employed by the recently formed Salt Union was held at Northwich on Saturday night. Acting on the advice, it is stated, of Mr. Broadhurst, M.P., and other trades unionist leaders, they have resolved to demand better terms as to hours of labour and wages. About 5,000 men and their families are concerned. A special delegate meeting, representing over 30,000 steam coal miners of the Rhondda Valley district, was held at Pentre, near Pontypridd, on Saturday evening, and it was unanimously agreed that the South Wales and Monmouthshire Miners' Federation be asked to take into consideration the question of appealing to the employers for a further advance of 5 per cent. in wages. Mr. W. Abraham, M.P., said that although complaint was made that the sliding scales did not benefit workmen, it was a fact that Durham and South Wales had maintained the wages rate above the standard of 1879 up to the present, and that other counties without sliding scales had, during the same time, fallen to a much lower rate of wages. He contended that the 10 per cent. recently granted English miners did not bring the wages of those men up to the present position of South Wales.

ELECTRICAL AND PUMILIO-PINE TREATMENT.—Every man and woman suffering from gout, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, indigestion, paralysis, epilepsy, liver complaints, nervous debility, and any nervous or organic derangement, should send for one of Johnson's Patent Hygio-Electric Belts, which combine the efficacy of a portable voltaic battery with the hygienic properties of Dr. Dautenhahn's "Medicated Pumilio Pinol Felt." This belt is the only scientific bona-fide electric belt offered to the public. It is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.—Write for pamphlet, post free from W. G. Johnson, Medico-Electric Belt, Truss, and Battery Company (Limited), 55, New Bond-street, London, W.—[ADVT.]

There is unquestionably no better remedy in the whole world for all cough and throat troubles than Keating's Lozenges; any medical man will assure you of this fact. Relief is speedy; they contain no strong acting, but only simple drugs, the most delicate can take them. Sold everywhere in 13½d. tins.—[ADVT.]

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION, Nov. 10.

COURT FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF CROWN CASES RESERVED.

REGINA V. CLARENCE.

In this case the prisoner was charged under the Offences against the Person Act, 24 and 25 Victoria, chap. 100, on two counts, with inflicting grievous bodily harm upon his wife, and also with an assault, he having communicated to her a certain disease. He was convicted at the Central Criminal Court, but the question of whether he could be properly convicted under the statute was reserved for the consideration of this Court, and was argued last term. The judges not being unanimous, Mr. Justice Wills, the junior judge, first delivered judgment in accordance with the usual practice. He said that he was of opinion that the conviction should be quashed. No mention was made in the statute of this class of offences; and the alteration of the criminal law involved, if the conviction were affirmed, would have very widespread consequences. A wide door would be opened to inquiries not of a wholesome kind, in which the difficulties in the way of arriving at the truth were enormous, and a new field of extortion, and perhaps oppression, would be opened. Such an extension of the criminal law should be made by the legislature, and by the legislature only; and although there was no palliation for the prisoner's conduct, yet that did not justify the Court calling the offence by another name in order to bring it within the criminal law in a manner which no one had hitherto dreamt of. If the conviction were upheld it raised a question as to persons communicating small-pox or scarlet fever, whereas it was clear that what the Act contemplated was personal violence.

Mr. Justice A. L. Smith and Mr. Justice Mathew also were in favour of the conviction being quashed.

Mr. Justice Stephen said that if the principle involved in the conviction was right it must apply to women as well as men and unmarried women as well as wives, and to diseases of any kind communicated by one person to another, and a man who had scarlet fever and shook hands with another might be indicted under these sections. He did not think there was grievous bodily harm or an assault of the nature contemplated by the statute. The abominable nature of prisoner's conduct could not, however, be exaggerated, but the question should be dealt with by statute. He was therefore of opinion that the conviction should be quashed.

Mr. Justice Grantham, who was absent, agreed, it was said, with Mr. Justice Stephen.

Mr. Justice Hawkins was of opinion that the prisoner was rightly convicted, and that the conviction should be affirmed. The prisoner knowingly inflicted grievous bodily harm upon his wife, and such conduct was legal cruelty, which would entitle his wife to a judicial separation. He thought the framers of the Act intended that where grievous bodily harm was maliciously caused by any means, the offender should be liable to punishment, and that punishment should also follow where actual injury short of grievous bodily harm was inflicted maliciously. Prosecutions for injuries caused by a kiss or a shake of the hand, where it was not done maliciously, would not be tolerated in any criminal court, but he could conceive cases where these acts were done maliciously, and where proceedings might be taken. He did not think the consequences shadowed forth by his learned brothers would follow if the conviction were upheld, and he could not be a party to a judgment which would proclaim to the world that, under the law of England, in the year 1888, a man might maliciously be guilty of such barbarity and not be punished. He thought the conviction should be affirmed.

Mr. Justice Day, who was absent, concurred, it was said, in this judgment.

Mr. Justice Manisty, Mr. Baron Huddleston, and Mr. Baron Pollock were in favour of quashing the conviction, while Mr. Justice Field thought it should be affirmed, as did also Mr. Justice Charles, who was absent.

The Lord Chief Justice said that for some time he thought the conviction should be affirmed, which he was sure everyone would desire if it could be done without violating the principles of sound law and construction. It seemed, however, impossible in that event to deny that a conviction could be sustained if a father or relative infected a child with small-pox by kissing it if they knew they had the disease and the child did not.

There being nine judges in favour of quashing the conviction and four only supporting it, the conviction was quashed in accordance with the view of the majority.

Conviction quashed accordingly.

(Before Mr. Justice DENMAN and a Special Jury.)

M'LAREN V. WINFIELDS (LIMITED) AND OTHERS.

The defendants in this case were manufacturers of brass and iron work at Birmingham, and in November, 1885, the plaintiff was engaged by the company's predecessors in business as their London manager. He now sued for damages for wrongful dismissal, and also for sums said to be due to him on account of salary and of commission. On the other hand, the defendants pleaded a justification of the dismissal, and they counter-claimed in respect of some money which had been handed to the plaintiff.

Mr. Channell, Q.C., and Mr. Peile were for the plaintiff, and Mr. Francis Williams, Q.C., and Mr. Woodfall for the defendants.

The case for the plaintiff was that he was engaged at £1,000 a year, of which £500 was called salary and £500 commission upon the then turnover of the business, which was put down at £20,000 a year. If the business should be increased beyond this sum, then he was to have 2½ per cent. upon the increase. It was further said that early in Aug., 1887, he was suffering from nervous depression, and went to Brighton by doctor's orders, got worse, and before complete recovery was told that he was regarded as having, by his absence from business, put an end to his engagement, and his employment ended.

For the defence it was denied that the plaintiff was engaged at £1,000 a year, and it was said that he was told that the firm could not afford more than £500 a year, though something was said about increased payment should the business be worked up. It was further said that the plaintiff went to Brighton without giving notice to any one, that he was improperly absent, that the way in which he had acted amounted to negligence in conducting the defendant's business, and justified the putting an end to the employment. On the other hand it was said on behalf of the plaintiff that he had received a fortnight's leave of absence to go to Brighton.

The jury considered the matter for some time out of court, and then returned with numerous findings, upon which a good deal of discussion took place. Among other things they found that the salary at which the plaintiff was engaged was £500, and not £1,000 a year. They found against the defendant company and for the plaintiff in respect of arrears of salary and wrongful dismissal for the amount of £222, and for the defendant company upon a counter claim for £6 9s 4d. As to the defendants who originally carried on the business there was a verdict for them.

Mr. Justice Denman said that this would probably become a cause célèbre, so far as the taxation of costs was concerned. He refused a stay of execution with the view to an appeal, saying that he thought that it was a very sensible verdict.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSION HOUSE.—THE NEW LORD MAYOR.—Mr. Alderman Whitehead, on taking his seat for the first time during his mayoralty, said it was exceedingly gratifying to him to see how orderly and well-conducted were the crowds that had assembled on the previous day to witness the civic procession through the City. Good humour, too, prevailed everywhere along the route. He knew, in commencing his duties as chief magistrate, how laborious must be the work he would have to perform, but he felt he could rely upon the trained skill of Mr. Cecil Douglas, the chief clerk; Mr. Trotter, the second clerk; Mr. Marshall, the cashier, and all associated in the business of the justice room. Unfortunately, the charge-sheet was unusually heavy, there being no fewer than forty prisoners in the cells, but that could be accounted for by the fact that most of the spectators congregated in the district within the cognisance of the court, and it was in their midst that most of the crime was committed.

LUCKY RECOVERY.—John Connell, 20, Thomas Daley, 17, and Frederick Wood, 17, were charged with stealing a gold chronometer, valued at £140, from the person of Paul Adolph Stern, a Conseiller d'État et Attaché de Medecin, Russian Embassy in Berlin. As Dr. Stern was looking at the Lord Mayor's procession a rush was made by a number of roughs, and his waistcoat was torn open. Wood was seen to snatch his watch, and on turning the doctor saw that he had it in his left hand. He seized the youth, but he managed during the struggle to pass the watch to Daley, who in his turn threw it towards Connell, a little distance away. The watch fell on the ground, and Connell picked it up and put it in his pocket, and was making off with it when he was arrested by the police. After a stern denial the prisoners admitted the theft, and were each sent to gaol with hard labour for six weeks.

BOW-STREET.—THE DEMON AT THE JODRELL.—Amongst the summonses before Mr. Bridge at Bow-street police-court were one against George Saville, of the Jodrell Theatre, Great Queen-street, for assaulting W. R. S. Ralston on Oct. 26; and another against Mr. Ralston for assaulting Mr. Saville at the same time and place.—Mr. Candy, Q.C., and Mr. Arthur Gill appeared for Mr. Saville; Mr. Warburton appeared for Mr. Ralston.—The alleged assaults occurred during a dispute that arose over the business transactions in connection with the performances of the Russian opera "The Demon" at the Jodrell Theatre.—Mr. Bridge interrupted Mr. Warburton in his opening speech, and suggested that both parties should consent to be bound over to keep the peace. A difficulty, however, arose, as it appeared that actions for slander against Mr. Ralston had been commenced by Mr. Saville and Mr. Austin Brereton, who was present at the time of the alleged assaults.—Mr. Saville, through Mr. Candy, expressed his willingness to withdraw his action, providing he was not called upon to be bound over.—Mr. Bridge asked Mr. Brereton, who was in court, whether he also consented to withdraw his action.—Mr. Brereton said he could not. He had been grossly slandered.—Mr. Warburton said in that case he must go on with these summonses. He could not consent to withdraw while either action was pending.—Mr. Bridge said that if the case must be fought out, owing to the lateness of the hour, he must adjourn it. It would stand over for a fortnight, and he would ask learned counsel to inform him before that time whether any amicable arrangement had been come to, as, if not, he would provide sufficient time to try the case.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—DISORDERLY HOUSE PROSECUTION.—Alfred and Amelia Becker were charged on remand with using a certain portion of a house in Berners-street for immoral purposes. The complaint was that of a medical man on the ground floor of the house, who had been greatly annoyed by the woman taking strange men upstairs.—The defence was that they came in for the purpose of purchasing birds from an aviary on the upper floor, but this defence was abandoned.—Mr. Newton told the man that he was a despicable person. He had no sympathy whatever for a man who lived on his wife's immorality. He must go to prison for a month, with hard labour, and the woman must pay a fine of 20s, and £4 costs, or, in default of distress, be imprisoned for a month.

DALSTON.—'BUS CONDUCTORS' GRIEVANCE.—Edward Lancaster, a horsekeeper, in the employ of the London General Omnibus Company, was charged before Mr. Bros, at Dalston Police-court, with riotous conduct at Upper Holloway, and violently assaulting a conductor named Flynn, and also the police.—Mr. Rendall Moore, who appeared to prosecute, stated that early this morning there was a meeting of drivers and conductors in the employ of the London General Omnibus Company to protest against the system of blackmailing adopted by the horsekeepers in the same employ. It was a well-known fact that, unless the horsekeepers were feed by the drivers and conductors, they sent out dirty and ill-conditioned horses, and as a consequence drivers and conductors got into disgrace, and sometimes were discharged. The meeting in question was called at the Devonshire Castle, Grove-road, after the drivers and conductors had finished work, but a large crowd of horsekeepers and others congregated about the doors of the house, and attempted to assault the men as they went in and out of the meeting. Prosecutor was struck a violent blow between the eyes by the prisoner, and severely bruised.—Police-inspector Worley, Y Division, corroborated as to the assault, and gave an opinion that had not police precautions been taken a very serious disturbance would have resulted. Police-constables 376 and 277 Y were also assaulted by the prisoner.—Isaac Swan, a conductor, said he received a kick in the mêlée.—Prisoner, in reply to the magistrate, admitted having been in the disturbance with about fifteen other horsekeepers and about 150 of the general public. He was not aware of having struck Flynn; but the fact was that Flynn was the sole cause of all the disturbances between the drivers, conductors, and horsekeepers. He (prisoner) had good characters from both the army and the navy. It was untrue that he or the other horsekeepers had starved the horses or sent them out dirty.—Mr. Bros: These men have a right to hold a meeting to discuss their grievances, and you must be taught that they are not to be molested. You must pay a fine of 40s or go to prison for a month.

WORSHIP-STREET.—RECOVERY OF STOLEN WATCHES.—Alfred Thompson, 36, and Robert Thompson, 34, brothers, described as cabinetmakers, were charged on suspicion of having been concerned with others in stealing, in the city of Glasgow, 100 watches, value £250. They were further charged with receiving some of the property, well knowing it to be stolen.—It was stated that on Oct. 24 last a traveller in the service of Messrs. Stauffer and Co., of Charterhouse-street, Holborn, was robbed in Glasgow of a travelling-case containing 100 watches. Some of the watches were found at pawnbrokers' in the Hackney and Bethnal-green roads, and Robert Thompson was identified as the pawner of two lots of watches. He said he had bought them of a man whom he only knew as a dealer in jewellery and a buyer at the auction sales in the City. Alfred Thompson was also identified as having had some slight dealing with the property.—Prisoners were remanded.

WOOLWICH.—BURGLARS' CHOICE.—William W. Young, 26, and John Sawyer, 18, were brought up, on remand, charged with committing five burglaries at Plumstead, between the 23rd and 27th ult. (sometimes two houses being broken into on one night), and Alfred Swinburne, 29, general dealer, of 42, Beresford-street, Woolwich, was charged with feloniously receiving the proceeds of the burglaries.—The depositions being completed, Mr. Marsham stated that he would commit the prisoners to take their trial at the next Old Bailey Sessions. Young: I'd rather be tried at Maidstone, your worship.—Sawyer: So would I, sir.—Mr. Marsham: Why? The Old Bailey Sessions will commence on Monday week, but I do not know when the Kent Assizes will be.—Young: I'd rather wait a month or two in prison, and go to Maidstone.—Mr. Glanville (clerk): The witnesses are all bound over to appear at the Central Criminal Court, your worship.—Young: The papers have not gone out yet. Make it Maidstone, your worship. It won't make any difference to you, will it? (Laughter.)—Mr. Marsham (smiling): No, it will make no difference to me personally—(laughter)—but why do you wish so particularly to go to Maidstone?—Young: It's an ever so much better prison, your worship.—Sawyer: It's a better prison and easier work. (Laughter.) Do make it Maidstone.—Mr. Marsham: I dare say it may be true what you say; but as all the witnesses live in this neighbourhood, and they are bound over to appear at the Central Criminal Court, you must go there.—The prisoners were then conducted out of court laughing, evidently much pleased with the amusement they had caused.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH.

With reference to the recent mysterious death of a lady our Plymouth correspondent telegraphs: "The facts are as follows—Miss Auf'm Wasser travelled from Plymouth, on Saturday, Nov. 3, by the train due at Swindon at five minutes after four. At Swindon Junction she was found to be so seriously ill that her removal from the train was imperative. By advice Miss Wasser was taken into the hotel at the station and put to bed, and all that the most watchful care and the best professional skill could suggest was done for her, but she died at Sunday midnight. At the inquest subsequently held a verdict in accordance with medical testimony was returned, the medical testimony being to the effect that death was due to apoplexy, resulting from excessive vomiting. It was stated in evidence that amongst the effects of Miss Wasser was a bottle containing a medicine, one of the ingredients of which was tincture of iron. This was contained in a bottle, on the label of which was written in French, 'Two or three teaspoonfuls in the day time.' The mixture could not therefore have been of a very powerful character, and it is regarded as unlikely that the violent vomiting was due to it. Dr. Spackman says it is possible that some other drug might have been taken, but this theory was dissipated by a post-mortem examination. In the body of the dress of the deceased was found an unsigned letter, from which it was gathered that she was enciente. This letter was in a gentleman's handwriting, evidently a person of good education. The writing is singularly large and of the 'up-and-down' type. The utmost interest still exists as regards this case, and further investigation is probable."

Bishop O'Dwyer, of Limerick, has addressed to the Vicar-General of the diocese a pastoral letter discountenancing a proposed scheme of free emigration from the city and district to the Argentine Republic.

Yesterday the New Zealand Company's steamer Kaikoura arrived at Plymouth with 18,292 carcases of mutton.

A sad shooting fatality occurred in Liverpool yesterday afternoon. Hugh Montgomery Lang, a youth living with his widowed mother, was turning over the contents of a box to find a book, when he discovered a revolver, which had belonged to his recently deceased father. The boy pointed it at his sister's head and pulled the trigger. The weapon was charged, and a ball pierced the forehead of the unfortunate girl, who died in less than five minutes.

WORKING MEN AND VOLUNTARY SCHOOLS.—A largely-attended meeting of the Council of the Church of England Working Men's Society was held, at their offices, in Tavistock-street, on Saturday night, the President, Mr. E. M. Wigram, being in the chair. The following resolution was unanimously adopted, having previously been notified throughout the society: "That the Council of the Church of England Working Men's Society regards with thankfulness the recognition in the 'majority report' of the Royal Education Commission of the services rendered to the cause of elementary education by voluntary schools, and trusts that in any legislation upon that report their just claims to additional support from public services will be fully considered, in order that religion as the true basis of all sound morality may be maintained and the rights of conscience preserved. Further, that this council pledges itself to oppose to the utmost of its power any scheme which has for its object the unsettlement of the Education Act of 1870 in the direction of the system of universal Board Schools and of free and secular education as an infringement of the rights and liberties of those conscientiously opposed to such a system. The Council strongly urges upon each branch of the society the necessity of energetic and continual action in favour of the above report by the holding of public meetings, bringing their influence to bear upon their local M.P.'s, and in every other practical manner." A lengthened discussion ensued upon the coming School Board election, members of the council pledging themselves to vigorous action on behalf of the Church candidates in the various divisions.

HOME VERSUS WORKHOUSE.—A strong-looking man told Mr. Bros at Dalston Police-court, on Saturday, that he had been unable to get work for some time, and that his children had no food. He could not bear to hear the poor children crying for bread, and he went to the police. The inspector at Hackney very kindly gave him 6d for immediate necessities, and told him to go to the relieving officer. The officer, however, informed him he would have to go into the workhouse, as they did not give outdoor relief to able-bodied men.—Mr. Bros: You must take the relief they offer. I cannot alter it.—Applicant: Because I am able-bodied, I suppose I must starve! I don't want to break up my house and go into the workhouse when I am quite able to work outside if I could get it.—Mr. Bros: I am sorry I cannot help you. You must abide by the law.

PARNELL V. WALTER.—In the First Division of the Court of Session, Edinburgh, on Saturday, the counsel for the Times lodged a reclaiming note against the judgment of Lord Kinnear in allowing proof of jurisdiction in the case of Parnell v. Times. The note was sent to the Summary Roll, and it will soon come up again. In the meantime, further proceedings before Lord Kinnear are stopped.

THE ARMADA.—Plymouth Sound. The Harvest Home. The Last Lead. The Abduction. Spain. A [illegible] of the Inquisition. The Attempt to seize the "Vixen." Elizabeth's Court. The News of the Armada. [illegible] View of Westminster Abbey and [illegible] Cafe. The Trained Bands. Recalling the Volunteers. [illegible]

THE ARMADA.—The Game of Bowls on Plymouth Hoe. Realisation of the Picture by Seymour Lucas, A.R.A., under his kind supervision, and by the special permission of the Publisher. The Fleet in Sight.

THE ARMADA.—The Council of War Aboard the Admiral's Ship. The Fight off Calais. The Fire-ships. The Defeat of the Armada. The Spanish Inquisition. The Auto da Fe. The Rescue. Whitehall. A Royal Reward. The Thanksgiving at St. Paul's. Elizabeth's Triumphal Progress. God Save the Queen. God Save You, My People.

THE ARMADA.—The unanimous praise bestowed upon this historical drama and grand spectacle by the leading press of the country is rightly endorsed by the crowded audiences which fill Drury-lane Theatre at each performance.

THE ARMADA EXHIBITION. Inaugurated by the Earl of Winchilsea and Nottingham. Unanimously pronounced by the press to be the most interesting and varied historic exhibition now open. Open to all persons booking seats, from eleven a.m. till five p.m. Open to all persons occupying [illegible] from seven p.m. till eleven p.m., [illegible]

THE ARMADA.—Times says: "A great success was achieved, and the fame of the theatre as the home of spectacular displays cannot fail to be increased by this latest addition to their number. [illegible]"

THE ARMADA.—Times says: "The great naval [illegible], which can be called no less than a triumph of stage [illegible], was received on Saturday with shouts of applause, and if [illegible] would be sufficient to attract the public for many a day. At the fall of the curtain there was loud and prolonged applause."

THE ARMADA.—Daily Telegraph says: "In a scene of general excitement, Mr. Augustus Harris on Saturday night succeeded in launching one of the mightiest, most showy, and costly vessels that have ever been built in the dramatic docks of Drury-lane. The sea-fight between the Armada and the English war-vessels off Calais may be pronounced the most effective historical picture ever realised on the modern stage. [illegible] This scene alone will attract all London."

THE ARMADA.—Daily Telegraph says: "In his pictures of the Inquisition Mr. Harris has been careful not to give offence. All was done in scrupulous good taste. [illegible] 'The Armada' is a noteworthy advance on anything that has been recently attempted in giving artistic and thoughtful work to a popular stage. Such enterprise must succeed."

THE ARMADA.—Daily News says: "The authors of 'The Armada' have drunk deep of the sentiment of the most stirring and the most truly national episode of our annals. The story undoubtedly interested and amused the spectators. The dialogue is exceptionally good. The great battle off Calais is the most striking feature and the scenic climax of the play. [illegible] 'The Armada' may safely be assumed to be launched upon a long and prosperous career."

THE ARMADA.—Morning Post says: "In 'The Armada' Messrs. Henry Hamilton and Augustus Harris have hit upon a happy idea that will bring substantial reward to them, and will at the same time supply for months to come a great deal of enjoyment for the playgoing public. We may heartily congratulate the authors on the work they have done. [illegible]"

THE ARMADA.—Morning Post says: "It is the fight off Calais that most excites the audience. Nothing like this nautical spectacle has ever been attempted before, and the [illegible] in the Drury-lane bill until Christmas at least. [illegible]"

FAUST UP TO DATE.—GAIETY.

GREAT SUCCESS of new song FOR YOU, SUNG by Miss FLORENCE ST. JOHN, in FAUST UP TO DATE:

"O love, forgive me, and forget
That on life's road our pathways met!
O Time, thy kindly mantle cast
Upon the memory of the past.
They told me if we linked our lives
That you would rue the day,
And when the sorrows gathered round
Your love would pass away.
But, had I known what life would be,
When every hope had fled,
Those words I spoke that night
Had ne'er by me been said.
For you, for you, my darling,
I spoke those words untrue,
I left you tho' I loved you,
And broke my heart for you.
For you, for you, my darling,
I spoke those words untrue,
I loved you tho' I left you,
And broke my heart for you."

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH says: "'Faust up to Date,' produced last night, is an infinitely better and more enjoyable entertainment than any of its popular predecessors."

FAUST UP TO DATE.—GAIETY.

THE STANDARD says: "The changes of tableaux, effected by what is known as 'mechanical' means, are both skilfully contrived and effective; and the handsome dresses of the choristers, and the arrangement of the processions and incidental dances, are thoroughly admirable. Nothing appears to have been spared to render 'Faust up to Date' a success."

FAUST UP TO DATE.—GAIETY.

THE MORNING POST says: "The house was crowded, and nothing was wanting that could give assurance of a thorough and unqualified success."

FAUST UP TO DATE.—GAIETY.

THE DAILY CHRONICLE says: "Mr. George Edwardes has bestowed all the advantages that care and liberal expenditure can furnish. There is an abundance of humorous situation carried through by some of the very best burlesque talent upon the English stage. Each scene is bright with handsome dresses and pretty faces."

VAUDEVILLE.—Mr. Thomas Thorne, Sole Lessee and Manager.—THIS EVENING, at 8.30, JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART (203rd time), by Robert Buchanan. Mr. Thomas Thorne and original company. At 7.45, THE BROTHERS. For full cast see under clock.—Box-office open ten to 5.30.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Times says: "A more wholesome, more vigorous, more interesting, more enjoyable play . . . the public could not wish to see. The success . . . was unequivocal."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Daily Telegraph says: "'Joseph's Sweetheart' is, unquestionably, a clever piece of dramatic work, vigorous in action and replete with hearty and refreshing humour."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Daily Telegraph says: "Playgoers of all classes will be glad to renew their acquaintance with the delightful Parson Adams, so characteristically embodied and capitally played by Mr. Thomas Thorne; they will follow again with delight the scenes in which the virtuous Joseph and the passionate Lady Booby are engaged. Their sympathies will be arrested by the pathetic rendering of Fanny Goodwill by Miss Kate Rorke, and no doubt will have many words of praise to bestow on Mr. Fred Thorne as the little Welshman, and on Mr. Cyril Maude as the exquisite Lord Fellamar."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Daily Telegraph says: "Mr. Thorne has made a speciality at his house of high-class old English comedy, and 'Joseph's Sweetheart,' as a play and an example of modern dramatic literature, reflects credit on all concerned in it. Successful at the outset, the play is likely to attain an even wider popularity, seeing that comedies of this ambitious class are rare, and that the playgoing public has settled down to enjoy a spell of sound autumnal amusements. The house was as crowded last night as it was enthusiastic."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Morning Post says: "'Joseph's Sweetheart,' which, so far from losing any of its interest with the public through the iteration of 150 representations, is still as popular as ever."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—Mr. THOMAS THORNE as PARSON ADAMS.—The Morning Post says: "Mr. Thomas Thorne's fine impersonation of Parson Adams maintains its wonted pre-eminence in the cast. It is indeed an admirable stage portrait, strikingly true to the humour and sentiment of Fielding, and not less remarkable for artistic delicacy of execution than for vigorous grasp of conception. The actor may fairly claim to have 'created' the part, in the histrionic sense of the word."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Morning Post says: "It will suffice to say that through that long and varied practice to which allusion has already been made, the general representation has acquired smoothness, spirit, and finish in rare perfection."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Echo says: "The original company return to their comfortable and well-managed house to again delight and to entertain their patrons."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Era says: "The fresh purity of its tone, the dramatic nature of its stronger scenes, and the healthy humour and honest pathos which pervade the piece, make 'Joseph's Sweetheart' a charming and agreeable play. The mounting of the piece was learned, lavish, and elaborate."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30. Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—Mr. THOMAS THORNE as PARSON ADAMS.—The Echo says: "As that sturdy, clean-souled Parson Adams, passing rich on (less than) £40 a year, Mr. Thorne is seen at his best. Amusing and pathetic, the fine character, one of the best in the whole realm of fiction, is most consistently presented, and when Mr. Thomas Thorne is on the stage it may justly be said of him, as was said of one of his most eminent predecessors in the histrionic art, 'He fills it.'"—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—Mr. THOMAS THORNE as PARSON ADAMS.—The Daily Chronicle says: "Mr. Thomas Thorne's Parson Adams is a ripe study, full of excellent points; when it is joyous it fairly beams upon the audience; when it is in grief it evokes a tender sympathy; and when it is raging in virtuous indignation, and the parson gives place to the man, it rouses a hearty feeling—half hilarious, half pugnacious—in unmistakable approval of justifiable weaknesses of the flesh. Mr. Thorne played last night with unmistakable fervour, and the night with the Parson, 'passing rich on twenty pounds a year,' was in every sense an enjoyable one."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Daily Chronicle says: "The piece was received with, at times, boisterous approval, and has apparently entered on a new stage of prosperity which will carry it far into the winter season."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Stage says: "The Vaudeville Company, after a prosperous trip to several of the principal country centres, returned to their town house on Monday evening. 'Joseph's Sweetheart,' which had been true to them in the metropolis, did not fail them in the provinces, nor is it likely to do so now it is once more exquisitely placed on the Vaudeville stage, and there treated with all the skill and resource of art that characterise Mr. Thomas Thorne's productions."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Stage says: "The play is surely the most literary one of the year, with dialogue pointed, yet entirely natural, and with simple yet powerful interests that realise and therefore justify Mr. Robert Buchanan's aspiration to preserve in 'Joseph's Sweetheart' the humanity of Fielding's genius."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—The Stage says: "Playgoers should at once repair to the Vaudeville, and then again repair, and yet a third time."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—203rd Time.—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30. Great Success.

THE WHITE DRAWING ROOM.—A Gentleman writes: "Whatever I do I do thoroughly. I determined to renovate everything in my drawing room with 'Aspinall's White Enamel,' so I had all the furniture and woodwork well pumice-stoned, then painted one coat. When that was hard I had it again pumice-stoned, then another coat of 'Aspinall,' and when that was hard I repeated the pumice-stoning process, and put on a third coat of 'Aspinall,' and the effect is beautiful beyond description; a perfectly hard marble surface, white as snow, and smooth as glass."
ASPINALL'S ENAMEL is sold everywhere, or sent post free in tins, 1s. 6d., and 3s. (for baths, 1s. 9d. and 3s. 6d.), from the Works, London. Colour cards, showing over 100 tints, free on application.

SANITAS OIL.

"I have found the inhalation of Sanitas Oil peculiarly useful in the cases of phthisis and bronchorrhœa. I now use nothing else. In spasmodic affections such as asthma its inhalation gives great relief.
"E. MAC DOWELL COSGRAVE, M.D."

"The inhalation of Sanitas Oil is especially valuable in relaxed sore throat, in diphtheria, in nasal catarrh, in ozena, in asthma, in bronchitis (especially the chronic forms), in pneumonia (greatly diminishing the offensive odour of the breath and sputa), in phthisis, and in all infectious diseases—scarlet fever, small-pox, measles, &c.

"One advantage of the Sanitas Fumigator is that the atmosphere of the patient's room can be constantly charged with Sanitas vapour, so that the patient can continue to breathe the soothing, healthful fumes for any period that may be desired.
"WILLIAM ANDREWS, M.D., M.R.C.P., and M.R.C.S. Lond."

"I am using your Sanitas inhalations in several cases of phthisis with very favourable results.
T. D. NICHOLSON, M.D."

"I have used Sanitas Oil to fumigate sick rooms (with the fumigator sent out by yourselves) and found it very pleasant and salutary." E. CROCKETT, F.R.C.S.E.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

"I feel duty bound to inform you of the wonderful effects of Clarke's Blood Mixture on me. I have had suffering over two years of a severe nature. I first consulted the best medical aid I could possibly procure for over six months, till my means were run out, and with a sad heart I was compelled to come into the workhouse hospital, where I now am. I had been here 18 months, and my legs gradually got worse. I began to think they would never get better, till about five months ago I read in a copy of the Hull, East Yorkshire, and Lincolnshire Times of 'Clarke's Blood Mixture,' and I determined that when I could raise the means I would try it; so I commenced to deprive myself of little necessaries till at length I had raised eleven shillings. I got my sister to purchase me a large bottle. She brought me one in on May 6, and to my surprise she brought me 1s. 9d. back, which enabled me to purchase two small pots of your Miraculous Salve. I commenced to use the Blood Mixture on May 7. I then had five wounds on the left leg, one very large on the ankle-bone, one on the shin about the size of half-a-crown, and three on the calf almost as large. The right leg was somewhat similar, but there were three sores which I thought would break into one, but all are perfectly healed up now but one small place on the left ankle about the size of a shilling. There are 15 patients in the ward that I am in, and they were surprised to see my legs when I had taken the mixture a week, and there are three of them now using it. I am very sorry, indeed, that I cannot purchase another bottle. You may judge for yourself how I am fixed, after being in here 18 months. My sister, Mrs. Bulmer, lives at No. 26, Grimsby-lane, Market-place, Hull, and if you would kindly send me a small quantity of your Mixture to the above address I should be able to get it, and I shall never forget you as long as I live.—Yours faithfully, EDWARD STATHAM.
"No. 8 Ward, Anlaby-road Workhouse Hospital, Hull, June 13, 1888."

LATER.

"I write to let you know how I am getting on. I received the bottle of Mixture you sent me, and the wounds are now completely healed up. I will be out of here in a few days, and get to work, which is already promised me. I am going to reside at my sister's, Mrs. Bulmer. If you wish to use this case for the benefit of other poor sufferers, do so. The results of your Mixture is really wonderful.—I remain, your thankful servant,
June 26, 1888." "EDWARD STATHAM."

LONDON, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 12.

On Saturday evening the first through express train from Paris arrived at Constantinople.

Demonstrations, at one time of a serious aspect, directed against the Conservatives, occurred at Madrid yesterday. A similar agitation prevails at Barcelona and Seville, supported chiefly by students.

Mr. Gladstone visited Wolverhampton on Saturday, and attended a crowded meeting at the Drill Hall, where a number of addresses were presented to him from various Liberal Associations in the district. While the right hon. gentleman was returning thanks a scene of the greatest disorder arose. A crowd of too energetic admirers at the back of the hall pressed forward and sought to obtain possession of the front places, and in the crush which ensued several women fainted. In the noise and confusion Mr. Gladstone's speech was brought to an abrupt termination, and he and his party made their way to the railway station, being enthusiastically cheered all the way. Thence Mr. Gladstone journeyed to Oxford, being cordially greeted at the towns at which the train stopped.

In opening the new Drill Hall of the 2nd City of London Rifles, which has been erected in Farringdon-road, on Saturday, the Duke of Cambridge said no man had a stronger feeling for the Volunteers than he had, and nothing that he could do to support its interests and efficiency should be wanting.

Field-Marshal the Earl of Lucan died at his town residence in South-street, Park-lane, on Saturday afternoon, after a long illness. His lordship's age coincided with the years of the century, having been born in 1800. During the Crimean War Lord Lucan greatly distinguished himself.

Further investigation into the latest and most terrible of the Whitechapel tragedies has failed to establish anything like a tangible clue to the perpetrator of the crime. A neighbour of the deceased's states, in the most positive and circumstantial manner, that she saw and spoke to her at half-past eight on the morning of the murder, but this is at variance with the medical opinion, which is that death must have taken place at least two or three hours earlier. Several arrests were made yesterday, but all the persons taken into custody were released on giving satisfactory explanations of their conduct. The police authorities have issued a proclamation announcing that the Secretary of State will advise the grant of a pardon to any accomplice, not being a principal, who shall give evidence leading to the conviction of the murderer. The inquest will be opened this morning.

A communication has been received from the Home Office intimating that the Secretary of State is unable to advise a commutation of the sentence of death recently passed upon Richard Levi Bartlett.

Amid a dense fog a Socialist demonstration was held in Hyde Park yesterday afternoon to celebrate the anniversary of what is termed "the murder of the Chicago martyrs," and to denounce the suppression of free speech in Trafalgar-square. About 3,000 persons attended.

On taking his seat in the Justice-room of the Mansion House on Saturday the Lord Mayor expressed the gratification with which he had witnessed the good conduct of the crowds who had assembled on the previous day to see the civic procession.

On Saturday the Stock Markets were inactive. Consols showed no change. Home railways were irregular, American firm, and Canadian and Mexican steady. Foreign Government bonds slightly receded. Copper and Diamond shares improved a little.

ANOTHER stage in the apparently endless disputes between the South-Eastern and London, Chatham, and Dover Railways was reached on Friday last, when the Court of Appeal gave a unanimous judgment in favour of the latter company on the Folkestone traffic question. This result need surprise no one. There may, no doubt, be South-Eastern shareholders whose robust faith in Sir EDWARD WATKIN's star will survive the shock of so many legal adverse decisions, who may still think that their company has been very hardly treated in the law courts, and that its funds have been quite properly expended in prolonged efforts to get quit of an agreement into which it voluntarily entered a quarter of a century since; but many, it must be presumed, have been brought by experience to a different opinion. As for the outside public, their feeling with respect to the long-drawn-out litigation will simply be one of satisfaction at the failure of what seems to them on the surface an attempt to evade the fulfilment of very definite obligations found to be inconvenient. Whether morality—to say nothing of law and equity—is on the side of the courts or of the South-Eastern Railway in the view they have taken will be seen by a bare summary of the facts. The two companies, as is well known, have all along been rivals, as regards not only the local traffic through Kent, but also the lucrative Continental traffic by way of Dover, but the South-Eastern has practically exclusive possession of Folkestone. A perception of the advantages likely to accrue from a friendly division of the earnings from a field which they occupied in common led the two Boards to enter into a contract in 1863, by which it was agreed that, in consideration of the Chatham and Dover Company not interfering with its neighbour's business between Folkestone and Boulogne, the traffic of both lines, from Continental as well as local sources, by Folkestone and Dover, was to be "pooled," and the proceeds divided between them in certain proportions, which involved a gradually increasing per-centage to the junior of the two undertakings. The local traffic to be thus shared was defined in the agreement as "traffic carried by either company by rail from and to London and a radius of six miles beyond in Kent and Surrey to and from Folkestone and Dover." This contract, recognised at the time as a perfectly fair one, was submitted to the proprietors of both companies, and by them deliberately ratified. It was also confirmed by Acts of Parliament; and its provisions worked smoothly enough until about five years ago, when the South-Eastern Board first showed signs of dissatisfaction, and of a wish either to modify the agreement in a sense more favourable to their own interests or to terminate it altogether.

To take such a step, however, a plausible excuse was required, and it was supplied by the action of the London, Chatham, and Dover Company in establishing the Continental service by Queenborough and Flushing. Although in no sense so popular as the Dover route, the new service nevertheless attracted a good deal of the traffic to Germany and Belgium which otherwise would have gone by Dover, and the South-Eastern, naturally enough, felt aggrieved. Under these circumstances there were two courses open—either to get rid of the agreement and declare war to the knife according to the approved methods of "fighting chairmen," or to let the agreement stand, but to combat the rivalry of the Queenborough route by increasing the attractions and advantages of that viâ Dover. The latter plan would have involved substantial benefits to the public in the way of lowered fares and other boons; but, as the benefit of the travelling public is usually the last thing which fighting chairmen think about, the first of the two courses was chosen. The 1863 agreement was denounced by the South-Eastern on various grounds, the chief of which was that it was "ultra vires" of the company to execute, and it was claimed that an arbitrator should be appointed to decide the question of validity. The first question, then, to be settled was the validity of the "pooling" agreement. Litigation on this point, arising from the action of the South-Eastern Board, lasted about three years, every Court before which the case came for review deciding against that company, and the House of Lords, the ultimate tribunal, giving its judgment to the same effect. As the Chatham and Dover directors stated in their last report, these decisions established the validity of the agreement and its binding obligation on both companies, besides declaring that the Chatham Company had acted within its rights in having co-operated in the establishment of the Queenborough and Flushing service. The decision on this, the main issue, was considered "absolute and final." While, however, this particular litigation was in progress the Chatham Company had brought an action against the South-Eastern to recover the sums assumed to be due under the agreement and alleged to be improperly withheld, and in connection with this another question came up for discussion—that is, what constituted traffic to and from Folkestone, one of the terminal points in the "pooling" contract. When that convention was entered into, the only Folkestone station was at the harbour; but subsequently the South-Eastern Company opened two stations on the outskirts—Radnor Park and Shorncliffe—and they refused to treat the receipts at these points as part of the traffic which was to be brought into the common fund and divided. The Chatham and Dover Company, on the other hand, maintained that they were entitled to a share of all such receipts; and this contention, first decided in their favour by Mr. Justice KEKEWICH, has now been endorsed by the unanimous judgment of the Court of Appeal, expressed in emphatic terms. It is impossible, indeed, to plead any reasonable justification for the conduct of the South-Eastern Company. One main object of the "pooling" agreement was to ward off the threatened competition of the Chatham and Dover line by its extension to Folkestone, and the consideration given to the latter was a certain share of the Folkestone traffic receipts. But for this understanding the Chatham Company would have thrown out a branch line to Folkestone, and tapped that source of traffic in its own interest. No sooner, however, had its threatened opposition been thus bought off, and its rivalry in another direction found to be uncomfortably keen, than an attempt was made to circumvent the "pooling" agreement, by intercepting at outside stations a large part of the Folkestone traffic, and thus materially reducing the share accruing to the Chatham and Dover. The Shorncliffe station was enlarged and developed, so as to attract the passenger traffic to and from the new district behind the ever-popular Lees, and the Radnor Park one was established to effect the same purpose for the adjoining quarter. It was claimed by the South-Eastern that neither of these points came within the definition of Folkestone referred to in the 1863 agreement; but as both are within the municipal boundaries, and the town had since expanded so as to absorb them, this plea was summarily dismissed. The further plea in the shape of a counter-charge against the Chatham and Dover Company of having broken the agreement by establishing the Queenborough and Flushing route was also rejected. A consideration of all the circumstances must bring every impartial mind to the same conclusion as that reached apparently without the slightest hesitation by Lords Justices COTTON, LINDLEY, and BOWEN, that the South-Eastern Company is utterly in the wrong, and that the receipts at all the Folkestone stations belong to its rival as well as to itself, in the agreed proportions.

We cannot tell, of course, whether, as in the case of the original suit, the point now decided by the Court of Appeal will be carried to the House of Lords, and another long delay intervene before the Chatham Company obtain what so many Judges have declared to be its clear and indisputable rights. Whether the struggle is now ended or not, however, it is surely time to ask the shareholders of the South-Eastern, as the litigant which has been worsted, and has been, therefore, presumably at fault from first to last, if they are willing to see their funds wasted in such fruitless contests. They have not a single element of satisfaction throughout—indeed, the language of the Judges who decide against them is almost more galling than the judgment itself, for it implies that they never had a case which they were justified in fighting. Besides the very serious pecuniary loss—the law costs on both sides being enormous—there is the humiliation of feeling that the general public has not the slightest sympathy with the losing party. What the set-off to these reverses is, we are unable to perceive. The traffics of the South-Eastern are not so rapidly expansive, nor its profits so invariably on the increase, that the shareholders can well afford to indulge in the luxury of quarrelling with all their neighbours. We should be sorry to do Sir EDWARD WATKIN injustice, and it is possible that he may be grievously misunderstood, but undoubtedly his acts give the public the general impression that he is a little too aggressive. Instead of peace we witness strife; and, according to the popular belief, which finds countenance from such judicial decisions as that now under review, it is the Board of the South-Eastern which is primarily responsible. This is a matter which the shareholders must settle with their representatives, and in which, for their own sakes, they ought to intervene peremptorily and decisively. As it happens, the interest of the public is at one with theirs, for it is hopeless to expect great liberality of treatment from a railway whose managers devote their energies and funds to fighting their neighbours instead of competing with them in the art of attracting the patronage of the travelling community.

LORD HERSCHELL'S Commission has made a report on the corruption and chicanery that marked the proceedings of the Metropolitan Board of Works. The story is old, and it relates to a doomed institution. We have heard enough of the tricks of GODDARD and ROBERTSON, SAUNDERS and FOWLER, of the blackmail openly levied, and the "voluntary gifts" secretly received. Our regret is that the conditions of the inquiry preclude the proper punishment of the chief offenders, as the witnesses who have made a clean breast of it are entitled to a certificate of indemnity. We hope, however, that next Session the Government will fulfil the concluding recommendation of the Commissioners. Lord HERSCHELL and his colleagues say: "In view of the facts elicited by this inquiry we think it might have a wholesome effect if it were distinctly made a criminal offence to offer to any member or official of a public body any kind of payment, fee, or reward having any relation to the affairs of the body of which he was such member or official, and also to make the person accepting any such payment, fee, or reward amenable to the criminal law." We heartily agree with the suggestion, but at the same time we cannot trust to penal laws alone. Proper administrative superintendence is superior to prosecutions; prevention is better than punishment. We cannot approve the very mild manner in which Lord Herschell speaks of the moribund Board. They entrusted the questions of purchases and contracts, not to a small and responsible body, composed of their best men, but to all the members sitting as a private committee, and not as a public board. At these sittings any member could attend and any member could be absent. Consequently the architects who were on the Board made it their business to attend when questions in which their clients were concerned came on for adjudication, and their unprofessional colleagues accepted, of course, the advice of men whom they regarded as disinterested experts, when, in fact, they were interested parties to the contract. Now this system all round presupposes on the part of the Board either an absolute imbecility if they did not perceive the facilities for fraud they were making, or a general, if not a particular, knowledge of the corrupt transactions carried on. The blame must, no doubt, be divided. There were honest members of the Board who had no suspicion whatever of the tricks played by the clerks in the surveyors' office and by the outside architects; but then men so utterly blind to what was going on around them are unfit for any public position whatever; they would be incompetent members of a village vestry. With regard to the keener members of the Board, who could shrewdly guess why their professional colleagues said "Yes" or "No," it is obvious that, though not paid in cash, they were otherwise considered. How could they be harsh to friends with whom, perhaps, they had dined the night before?

As to the excuse of ignorance, we cannot admit it. The question of the Pavilion site was matter of public attention for years. When it was known that a fine space was to be opened at Piccadilly-circus all the architects and street-critics of London discussed the possibilities of the site. What great public building could be placed there was the question of the day, while all the music-hall proprietors of the Metropolis and all the projectors of new theatres pricked up their ears as they heard of the intended letting of the great "corner lot." The course that an honest Board should have pursued was obvious. Tenders ought to have been publicly invited, and as publicly recorded and discussed, so that the opinion of the people of London could have been expressed before a decision was announced. Instead of that a corrupt bargain was made between Villiers, Goddard, and Robertson; the Board undertook to take a paternal interest in the performances of the music-hall, and Goddard received from Villiers a secret salary of two hundred a year for what the Board pretended to consider an independent report on the way the hall was carried on. We do not believe that this open defiance of the remonstrances of rival managers and of the criticism of outsiders was an innocent piece of work. We believe that the majority of the Board knew very well that they were conniving at corrupt favouritism, and that they deliberately neglected their duty to their constituents and to the public. Long before the transaction was completed denunciations of it were dinned into their ears, and the "scandal of the Pavilion site" was a topic of public criticism and private talk. The fact is that the greater number of the men who sat at the Board were thick-skinned public persons of the vestryman type. They were indifferent to the attacks made on them, because they had interests of their own to serve. There is such a thing known as "log-rolling." A lumberman in the backwoods, if he has a log to roll too heavy for one man, goes to a neighbour and says, "If you help me to roll my log I will help you to roll yours." Figuratively speaking, the same system is tacitly pursued on many corporations, vestries, and boards. There is a reciprocal toleration of jobs. In the matter of the Pavilion site and other scandals, it might be possible to quote the approval of members of the Board who never received a penny from the parties interested; but, if we looked over all the transactions of four or five years, we should probably find these "disinterested" members solaced by a share in other transactions equally corrupt. The same practices pervade our vestries. Men sit on them who as house-landlords are interested in obtaining high rents from rotten dwellings. If the other members of the vestry are complaisant about his tenements, the owner of house property winks freely at any little jobs they may have on hand. Then all frown down and, if necessary, dismiss any doctor or sanitary inspector who is too officious in discovering bad smells and typhoid fever in lanes and alleys belonging to members of the Board. This tendency to corruption pervades the local life of all our minor elected bodies, but is held in check in our large cities and towns by the vigilance of the inhabitants. London, unhappily, is so large and is so full of Imperial interests and Parliamentary concerns that its biggest Boards dwindle to something like vestry rank, and so have a free field for shady transactions. The London School Board of former days had its scandals as to solicitors' fees, the Shaftesbury training ship, and reformatory schools. We now see what was inside that whitewashed sepulchre, the Board of Works. The vestries are notoriously incompetent and corrupt, as the state of the slums attests. It will be the same with the London County Council if public opinion does not keep a sharp eye on this new local parliament. Unless high-minded men of leisure and ability come forward as candidates, we shall have a new horde of hungry vestrymen pushing themselves to the front, eager for free lunches, secret bribery, and indirect pickings of all kinds.

We sometimes hear deprecation of the introduction of politics into local administration. No doubt it is an evil by itself. It is absurd to turn out of a corporation or board a thoroughly wise administrator because he happens to be a Radical or a Tory. There are, however, incidental advantages in a fierce party fight over local government. The party "in" are exposed to a fierce light of criticism because they have won after a sharp contest. Every appointment they make, every penny they spend, is "set in a note-book, learned and conned by rote, To cast into their teeth." The consequence is that where politics enter into a public body corruption is kept out. When, on the other hand, as in the case of the Metropolitan Board of Works, there was no political or other keen interest, the doings of the body were languidly regarded by public opinion, and they were free to mismanage, to muddle, and to take bribes all round. We see the result of the two systems in the London School Board. At first there was no religious or party feeling; everything went smoothly at the meetings; and the money of the ratepayers was profusely wasted in every possible way. Then came a fight over the question of voluntary schools. Some men earnest for religious education detected in the doings of the Board a policy pointing to the suppression of all denominational schools. They raised a cry, searched through the whole work of the Board, discovered scandals everywhere, and were borne on a wave of feeling into office three years ago. They immediately instituted economy and reforms in every direction, and now appeal for re-election. This gives to the impending contest a distinct interest. Englishmen are a combative race. The dry details of administration do not intrinsically interest them, but make it a religious or party question and they can attend at once. There are Radicals, Dissenters, and Secularists who denounce the outgoing Board as "friends of the Church," "promoters of religious teaching in Board schools," and "patrons of voluntary schools." A vision is conjured up of all the little children of England coming under the instruction of priest, parson, or minister, and thus losing all relish for advanced free thought. On the other hand, the friends of the old Board are accused of hostility to religion, of indifference to high rates, and of the indirect encouragement of Secularism. The indictments on both sides are highly coloured; but the exaggerations attract attention and secure that, whichever policy prevails, the persons charged with carrying it out will be closely watched, and not allowed to complete corrupt transactions or to throw money in the gutter like the members of the expiring Board of Works.

An important social question presents itself for consideration in two cases of an extremely painful nature, recently heard before Mr. Bridge at Bow-street. In the first, a young woman of twenty-one, following the occupation of barmaid, and described as of attractive appearance, was charged with stealing a shilling and some cigars, the property of the licensed victualler, her employer. Cash had been missed from the till; the girl was suspected; marked money was found upon her; and when arrested she confessed her guilt. In remanding her for a week the magistrate observed that, as cigars happened to be among the property embezzled, he could not help thinking that she must have been tempted by somebody; and he added that it would be well if landlords would not engage young and good-looking barmaids as an attraction. "It is a very bad thing for them," pursued Mr. Bridge; "for a young girl of twenty-one a public-house is not the proper place." The proprietor of the establishment where the peccant barmaid was employed seemed, curiously enough, to agree with the magistrate that it would be better to have male than female attendants in his bar; whereupon, cogently enough, Mr. Bridge inquired, "Why don't you engage them, then?" Later in the day another barmaid case occupied the attention of the Court. Yet another barmaid, also of attractive appearance, but only seventeen years of age, was charged with stealing marked money. Her employer was humane enough to offer to forgive her, and it was stated that a home had been found for her by a missionary, where she could be received until employment could be obtained for her. Mr. Bridge, in ordering the discharge of the prisoner, strongly advised her not to return to the public-house life, and he repeated his opinion that publicans ought not to try to make their houses attractive by employing young and good-looking girls. So Barmaid Number Two went off with the missionary to the home.

What to do with young folks who have stumbled on the threshold and have been guilty either of immorality or of positive crime is an exceedingly difficult question; but Mr. Bridge certainly does not afford any aid towards its solution in the curiously ill-advised remarks which he volunteered on the subject of barmaids. Does the worthy magistrate labour under the delusion that the pretty barmaid is by any means a novelty in London, or, for the matter of that, in all England? Why, she is nothing more nor less than Mary the Maid of the Inn or the neat-handed Phyllis of old English poesy. It is the barman, on the contrary, who is the innovation, and not always a welcome one, in English taverns. He is usually a promoted pot-boy, and there is a very adequate reason for his having to some extent superseded the comely, agile, and, as a rule, strictly honest barmaid. Within the last generation, and especially in eastern and maritime London and in the great outlying suburbs, the extraordinary increase of the population has led to a corresponding development in the dimensions of and the trade carried on in the public-houses; and many of these formerly modest establishments have grown so vast and attract such a miscellaneous class of customers that the employment of male instead of female labour has become practically a matter of necessity. Take the great transpontine thoroughfare, for example, which runs almost without a break in the bricks and mortar from the Elephant and Castle to Greenwich. Thirty years ago there were in the Old and New Kent-roads scores of quiet wayside inns, with the sign swinging from the post, and the horse-trough in front for the refreshment of the wagoner's patient steeds. At these old-fashioned houses a couple of barmaids, aided very often by the landlady or her daughter, sufficed to minister to the needs of the quiet customers; while a trim damsel waited in the parlour on the tradesmen who came to take their evening pipe and talk politics. Many of these quaint, and not unpicturesque, hostelries have by this time been transformed into roaring gin-palaces, all plate-glass, gilding, and varnished fittings. Instead of twenty customers there are a hundred; instead of a single bar there are half-a-dozen; and the affluence of business is so great, and the patrons of the establishment are so numerous, so impatient to be served, and so noisy that the publican who knows how to conduct his business properly is fain to recognise the fact that the task of waiting on these prodigious crowds of thirsty souls is quite beyond the capacity of young and delicate women. He is forced, very often quite against the grain, to hire strong, active, young men who do not mind listening to coarse language, and who, if need be, are muscular enough to officiate as "chuckers-out" should the over-alcoholised patrons of the place become inconveniently obstreperous. On the other hand, there are a multitude of quiet taverns where the barmaid finds congenial occupation, and where, as a rule, she is treated with kindness and consideration both by her employers and by the frequenters of the house. We utterly fail to comprehend the strange hallucination of so sensible a magistrate as Mr. Bridge in warning a girl, simply because she happens to be good-looking, against the perils of what he is pleased to stigmatise as the "public-house life." In what sense is it more dangerous than the theatrical life, or the milliner's shop life, or the factory life? Does the Bow-street magistrate think that a barmaid is exclusively employed in serving sots and reprobates? Does he think that even an appreciable proportion of the frequenters of taverns go thither for the purpose of insulting the barmaid by the use of ribald language, or of outraging her modesty by profligate advances? That there are female attendants at taverns who are foolish enough to listen to libertines is, unhappily, undeniable; but we unhesitatingly assert that the great body of young women employed in taverns and restaurants are as reputable as they are honest.

To judge from the well-meant but altogether uncalled-for strictures of Mr. Bridge, the public-house life would seem to be one radically of a demoralising nature. Can he be ignorant of the fact that in public-houses and restaurants there is in innumerable instances not only a landlord, but a landlady, who has often commenced her own career as a barmaid? Does he know that the landlord's daughter, or his niece, or his wife's sister, when the house is a quiet one, and the customers are steady-going, frequently assists in the bar? From the tone of the magistrate's deliverance, one might think that somebody had been telling him doleful stories about the brasseries of the Paris boulevards; and that in every London tavern and restaurant there are hordes of bold-faced and garishly-dressed hussies employed by the crafty proprietor of the dissolute den to be hail-fellow-well-met with the customers, and inveigle them into squandering their money on adulterated liquors. It is true that in London some years ago an adventurous licensed victualler essayed to increase the attractiveness of his house by dressing up his barmaids in the Bloomer costume, while an equally enterprising landlady of a large gin-palace incited her handmaidens to don tiaras and necklaces blazing with sham jewels. These devices, however, were but ephemeral, and excited more ridicule than patronage. English barmaids as a class are distinguished neither by outré apparel nor by free-and-easy manners. As in her Majesty's land forces, the great army of barmaids, in addition to its Line regiments, has its brigade of Guards; the tallest, handsomest, and stateliest of the sisterhood are enrolled behind the counters of the great metropolitan buffets. If worthy Mr. Bridge were to have his way, these refreshment counters would be tended only by the most stunted and ugly of females. Fortunately the public has long since made up its mind that the good-looking girls as well as the plain ones shall have a chance of earning a living. If the magistrate at Bow-street is of a contrary opinion, he should ask some friend to introduce a Bill into Parliament providing that all pretty girls of humble extraction should go as closely veiled as the women of Turkey and Egypt, and should never stir abroad save under the stern guardianship of the congeners of the Kislar Aga. A considerable number of our good-looking barmaids are the daughters of licensed victuallers who have fallen upon evil days, and whose children have been educated and maintained in the Licensed Victuallers' School. It would be a most deplorable and a most disastrous thing if the governors of that admirable charity were to be deterred by Mr. Bridge's caveat against good-looking barmaids from allowing the well-educated and well-conducted girls who leave the school to enter into respectable employment behind the bar. As we have said, there are public-houses too rough for a young woman to work in; there let the barman be predominant; but, at the same time, there are plenty of situations which can be most appropriately filled by barmaids, among whom, we repeat, dishonesty is the exception. We, therefore, must protest in the strongest possible manner against magisterial observations which, were they not controverted, might be calculated to take the bread out of the mouths of thousands of deserving and upright young women.

PARLIAMENTARY BUSINESS.

At three o'clock this afternoon the House of Commons will meet to proceed with the consideration of the Civil Service Estimates. Interesting discussions are expected upon the votes for the salaries of the Attorney-General, the Solicitor-General, and the Solicitor to the Treasury. Notices of opposition to these estimates have been given by Mr. Sydney Buxton, Mr. Philip Stanhope, Mr. Pickersgill, Mr. Hanbury, Sir George Campbell, and Mr. Samuel Smith.

The Select Committee of the House of Commons on Corn Averages and the Select Committee on Friendly Societies, which were unable to complete their respective inquiries within the limits of the pre-Autumn Session, have been summoned to meet again this afternoon.

To-morrow, at a quarter-past four, the House of Lords will reassemble, when Earl Granville will move the third reading of the Victoria University Bill, and Earl Spencer the second reading of the Oaths Bill.

During the four sittings of the House of Commons held last week the Government succeeded in obtaining fourteen votes in Supply. There are 121 remaining for consideration, of which number seventeen have reference to the Army, nine to the Navy, five to the Revenue Departments, and the remainder to the Civil Services. It is intended for the present to give precedence to the latter.

Lord Dunraven will preside to-morrow at a meeting of the House of Lords Select Committee on the Sweating System.

Letters have been received from Lord Salisbury, Mr. W. H. Smith, Mr. Arthur J. Balfour, and Mr. Goschen by Mr. J. Blundell Maple, M.P., thanking him for copies of a resolution passed at the opening of the new premises of the Dulwich Working-men's Constitutional Club and the kind assurances contained therein of confidence and support.

The first autumn soirée of the Meistersingers Club will take place on Wednesday evening, at 9.30. Members must apply for cards not later than Tuesday.

A Reuter's telegram, dated Athens, Nov. 10, states: "The betrothal of Princess Alexandra, the eldest daughter of the King, to the Grand Duke Paul of Russia was formally announced to M. Tricoupis, the Premier, by the King to-day. Subsequently a 'Te Deum' was sung in the Royal chapel to signalise the event."

The Mayor of Dewsbury has fixed Wednesday, the 14th inst., for the nomination, and Friday, the 16th inst., for the day of polling for the borough of Dewsbury.

It is announced that the Right Hon. Stephen Woulfe Flanagan, late Judge of the Landed Estates Court in Ireland, has been appointed a Lord Justice under the Privy Council in England, and will have a seat on the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Lord Justice Bowen will, on Dec. 4, distribute the prizes and certificates gained by the students of the City of London College.

PARIS DAY BY DAY.

[BY SPECIAL WIRE.]

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, Sunday Night.

This has been a day of rain and mist, but in spite of the unpromising aspect of things out of doors, the favourite promenades were by no means forsaken this afternoon. Many of the holiday-makers also repaired to the scenes of the dynamite explosions, which have enjoyed quite a succès de curiosité. Naturally Parisians are somewhat taken aback at this appearance of the "Dynamite Demon" in their midst; meanwhile the arrests continue, about a dozen persons having been so far locked up upon suspicion. One of the latest arrests has been that of Soudey, the "Secretary-General" of the League for the Suppression of the Employment-Registry Offices. Soudey combines with his avocations as Secretary-General and orator at noisy meetings the more practical if humble duties of cook at Maxime Lisbonne's restaurant, rejoicing in the characteristic name of the "Frites Révolutionnaires." He was captured as he was emerging from this establishment after his culinary labours. Soudey offered no resistance, but contented himself with telling the policemen that if they had attempted to track him to his kitchen, he would have run them through with a carving-knife—so, as far as they are concerned, it is perhaps as well that they waited for him outside. It is but fair to add that Lisbonne says he can prove an alibi. He declares that Soudey had not left his kitchen until a late hour for days together. Architects are engaged in drawing plans of the offices in the Rues Boucher and Française, and all possible pains is being taken to get at the root of the matter.

Notwithstanding their re-election Vice-President Anatole de La Forge and Questeurs de Mahy and Madier de Montjau decline to withdraw their resignations, so to-morrow voting tickets will again be in full play at the Chamber. At yesterday's sitting Mgr. Freppel put a question to the Minister of the Interior respecting the increase in the number of French emigrants every year. In 1887 more than 10,000 went abroad, and this year 20,000 free passages had been placed at the disposal of French labourers. This, too, at a moment when crowds of foreigners were finding work in France. The population, too, was decreasing. This remark provoked cries from some of the Radicals of "Then marry the priests!" But Mgr. Freppel asked if some measure could not be adopted to put a stop to this exodus. Under-Secretary Bourgeois replied that the Government could not prevent emigration, but that it was keeping a sharp look-out against abuses. The debate on the Army Budget was relieved with an able speech from M. de Freycinet, who dealt with technical and other questions in so clear and capable a manner as to evoke cheers from all sides of the House. The Minister of War expressed his conviction that the country would be equal to the sacrifices which it was called upon to make; but he must repeat that there was no aggressive motive in this expenditure, which was exclusively of a defensive character. "No one," concluded M. de Freycinet amid tremendous applause, "can be surprised at a great country like France desiring to assure beforehand, and in a complete manner, her independence before the whole of Europe." M. de Freycinet has been much complimented on this declaration.

The Reactionaries have taken the opportunity of the Centenary of the meeting of the States of Dauphiné to indulge in an important demonstration against the existing régime. Romans at the present moment is thronged with representatives of the old nobility of the Province and with descendants of the members who sat in the Assemblies held on Nov. 10 and 11, 1788. The Republicans are asking how it is that the grandsons and great-grandsons of these valiant Liberals are now animated by a spirit of "Reaction and Intolerance." These gentlemen, on the other hand, aver that they are faithful to their forefathers' principles, and are really on the side of Justice and Tolerance. Yesterday the proceedings commenced with a solemn service in the Cathedral of Saint-Barnard for the repose of the souls of the old Deputies, and an eloquent address was delivered by Mgr. de Cabrières, Bishop of Montpellier—himself a descendant of one of the members of the Parliament of Dauphiné—who said that their ancestors were not rebels, but were without a single exception devoted to the Crown. They were Liberals, and desired that the Rights of the King and those of the People should be placed on a stable footing. Their great principles were Civil-Equality and Religious-Freedom. After this service there was a banquet, at which one of the speakers reminded the company that it was at Romans that Gambetta made his famous exclamation—"Le Cléricalisme voilà l'ennemi." "Here," he remarked, "they would in their turn proclaim the Rights of God and Man. It would be said that they were Clericals who had come from every corner of France to sow disorder. This was not true! They were Patriots awaiting the hour of deliverance." During the afternoon and in the evening "Assemblies-General," attended by four hundred members, were held.

The latest story about the Boulangists is that Count Dillon had a long and confidential interview with the Comte de Paris at "a house in the West-end of London" on Wednesday. They would not have been likely to meet in the East-end, but the Boulangists indignantly describe the whole thing as a fabrication. Meanwhile, the General has had the worst of it in the action which he brought against the Electoral-bureau of La Voulte, in the Department of the Ardèche. Not only are the members of the Bureau acquitted, but General Boulanger has to pay the costs of the trial. It is set forth in the verdict that there was no foundation for the charge of fraud.

Baron Platel, who wrote remarkable social articles in the Figaro over the signature of "Ignotus," has just died after a long illness. He was a staunch Conservative, and used his pen so firmly in the defence of his principles that he was a frequent mark for the attacks and the sarcasm of his opponents. He was endowed with a power of vivid and picturesque expression which will be missed by many readers of the popular paper with which he was long connected.

Mystery as complicated and perplexing as that surrounding the gruesome murder in the Rue Morgue still hangs over the case of Marie Aguétant. On Friday the evidence was favourable to Prado's chances of escape from the doom of the guillotine, while yesterday four witnesses swore that he had been in Marie Aguétant's company several times before her death. This looked extremely bad for the accused until Don Garcia Jimenez, of Madrid, was called. This was the man who wrote to the French Ambassador in Madrid telling him that he knew the murderer of Marie Aguétant, but when examined yesterday he seemed to be completely dazed, and averred that he had forgotten what he had previously written or testified about Prado and the jewels. Down to the present the principal "points"—as the lawyers say—on which the Advocate-General has laid special stress as militating against the prisoner's innocence are, broadly speaking, the following: First, the letter written by Prado to Eugénie Forestier, who, according to her statements, had possession of his terrible secret, asking her to leave France; Secondly, the incriminating articles or pièces de conviction, such as the reticule and bank-note therein belonging to Marie Aguétant, which were cut by a sharp instrument; and, Thirdly, the jewellery sold in Spain or given to Mauricette Couronneau and others by the prisoner. Against all this the defence had the vague and flimsy evidence of Barbe Burg, the Alsatian bonne, who appeared on Friday and could not identify the accused; the depositions of Blès, the accredited "care-taker" of the murdered woman, who could not positively identify the jewellery or the reticule; and, finally, the suggestion which runs through the whole case that Eugénie Forestier turned informer in order to have revenge, at any price, on Prado, who had taken up with Mauricette Couronneau. Barbe Burg, the servant, said for instance on Friday that she heard noises in her mistress's bed room at one o'clock on the morning of the murder, while Eugénie Forestier said that Prado had returned home at midnight. M. Blès on his part deposed that Marie Aguétant carried a black reticule, while that among the pièces de conviction was red. Afterwards he said that he could not recollect if the reticule were red or black, and Madame Riboullet, Aguétant's sister—who was allowed to be called—said that the victim had only a sac noir. The President, however, temporarily settled the matter by observing that Aguétant had two reticules, a matter which the advocate of the principal prisoner will advert to in due time. Meanwhile, another theory respecting the origin and antecedents of the prisoner is afloat to-day. He is said to be a native of Dax, where his father held a farm called "Linska" by the country people. The father's name is Castillon, and his son has been away for sixteen years, having gone to join the Carlists. The subject has been sifted by the police, who find that a man named Castillon, who was born near Dax in 1846, deserted in 1874 from a French artillery regiment. Prado is also said to have had magnificent schemes in his head, and some time ago he offered M. Zadoc Kahn to found a colony for Israelites, and to the proprietor of the New York Herald he unfolded a scheme for eclipsing the undertakings of De Brazza or Stanley. Finally, he wanted to join the Jesuits as a kind of lay Superior-General. In Court yesterday the accused raised public expectation to a higher pitch of excitement by promising to reveal his identity later on.

On Saturday the first witness called was the girl Ruschmann, an old servant of Marie Aguétant, who had seen the mysterious "little American" whom her mistress frequently met and took home from the Eden Theatre. Previously Aguétant's sister showed the black reticule about which there was so much difficulty on Friday, and it was identified by Blès as one in which the victim kept money. Maître Danet, however, notified to the jury that the red sac among the pièces de conviction was used by the murdered woman to hold securities and bonds, and that, unlike the black reticule, it was firmly locked, and would accordingly have had to be cut open by the murderer. The Advocate-General also impressed a point on the minds of the Jury. He said that Blès—the friend of Aguétant—was doing his military service from October 19 to November 21, 1885; that on November 2 of the same year Eugénie Forestier received the money from America, twenty pounds of which she gave to Prado. It would be contended by the prosecution that part of this money was used by the prisoner to pay for the favours of Aguétant, and notably to remain with her a whole night during the absence of her friend Blès. Rosalie Ruschmann was then examined, Prado reminding the jury that she and others who were to follow her were influenced by what they had read in newspapers. She had seen the accused with Marie Aguétant at the end of October, 1885. Next morning the accused sent witness to a place in the Avenue d'Italie, which she could not find out; that day accused had not paid Marie Aguétant, so he said he would go out and return with the money. He was dressed in a brown overcoat, and was of small stature, with a brown moustache slightly turned up at the ends. She was positive that Prado was the man who had been with Aguétant, and afterwards visited her, dined with her, and took her to the Eden Theatre. On another occasion the prisoner took Aguétant to the Palais-Royal to buy her some jewellery, but when they arrived there he said that he had not yet received money which he was expecting from America. Marie Aguétant came home vexed that day, and said Prado had made a fool of her—Il m'a posé un lapin were the words used by the deceased woman. The dying depositions of the woman Fontanier, a friend of Marie Aguétant's, were then read in court, and her servant, Madame Vannier, was called. This witness deposed that she heard her dying mistress say that Prado seemed like the "little American" as regarded the colour of his hair, and in his look, which half-fascinated, half-frightened her. Clémencet, who put carpets down in Marie Aguétant's rooms, saw Prado in the Rue Caumartin. He was firmly, and beyond a doubt, convinced of the fact that Prado had been in Aguétant's company. So was the widow, Parent, a dressmaker, who worked regularly for the murdered woman. She also recognised the drawings of Aguétant's jewellery. Madame Rosenne, concierge in the house in the Rue Caumartin, was equally positive as to Prado being the petit gris, or "little American," but Prado still held out that he never knew the victim, and that the witnesses were thoroughly wrong as to his identity. The last witness, however, could not say that it was Prado who entered the house with Aguétant on the night of the murder. Aguétant came about half-past ten, and the gas was put out at midnight. At half-past twelve somebody tapped at witness's lodge, where she was dozing, and she opened the street-door for the person. The Spanish witnesses, the woman Ximenes and Garcia Jimenez, were then called, but only the last-mentioned appeared. He knew Linska since 1881, but he said he had forgotten about his letter to the French Ambassador stating that, if paid, he could point out the murderer. This witness caused much sensation in Court by his extraordinary evidence, and the Advocate-General expressed his regret that, as Jimenez was a foreigner, he could not have him arrested for perjury. The remark was applauded by people in Court, and Dolores Garces y Marcilla, the wife whom Prado so badly treated after having gambled away her dowry, then came forward, but was unable to speak for some moments owing to emotion. When interrogated by the President as to her letter denouncing Prado, she retracted everything that she had said against her husband, as she still loved him. Her only regret was that Prado was the father of a child which did not belong to her. Eventually she was led away weeping, and the case was adjourned until Monday. Thus ended the Sixth Day of this extraordinary trial, which Parisians find more absorbing than the most dramatic and blood-curdling of the feuilletons which are now running in popular newspapers.

A profound sensation has been caused at the trial in Constantine of Henry Chambige for the murder of Madame Grille by the evidence of the victim's husband. M. Grille said that his wife was the sister of one of his best friends, who died at Creusot, where he was an engineer. During their married life he never had occasion to reproach her in any way. She was the model of a good wife and mother, and was not by any means romantically inclined. M. Grille said he bore no special malice to Chambige, but he considered that he was the base murderer of his wife, and he accordingly called on the jury to do their duty. His wife's honour was at stake. Other witnesses having been called, the counsel for the Grille family denounced the accused as a lamentable disciple of the "décadent" Literary School, and contended that, as had been said by a witness, Madame Grille was murdered because she did not return the morbid, unhealthy affection which Chambige bore her. The advocate for Chambige replied, and during his speech the prisoner fell sobbing into the arms of his mother. The trial having terminated, Chambige was found guilty, but with extenuating circumstances, and he was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude.

Quite a revival of "Dumas literature" is taking place in Paris just now, and we seem destined to make the welcome acquaintance once more of all the brilliant swaggerers and swash-bucklers who figure in the picturesque pages of the Great Alexander. At the Comédie Française "Henri Trois" is being rehearsed, despite denials; while at the Porte St. Martin the "Chevalier de Maison Rouge" will soon be given. "Caligula," with its splendid Roman surroundings; its magnificent storm scene, and its excellent actors, including M. Garnier—who now enters the Second Théâtre Français from the Porte St. Martin—is likely to have a successful run. M. Alexandre Dumas fils has his time fully occupied in superintending the productions of his father's plays, and his own long-promised work will remain for some time longer on the stocks. The "Dumas Revival" promises to be, on the whole, successful, and will more than compensate Parisians for the silence of Sardou and Sarah.

This afternoon the Sunday Popular Concerts in the Cirque of the Champs-Elysées and the Châtelet Theatre were well-attended. In the former M. Lamoureux's programme was strongly Wagnerian, comprising the Overture to the Flying Dutchman, and Selections from Lohengrin, which were applauded. M. Colonne had also a highly-attentive and enthusiastic audience, for whom he had prepared the Prelude to Lohengrin, which was encored. So, too, was the Third-Movement from Mozart's Symphony in G Minor, while Madame Holmes's Symphonic piece, Irlande, with its closing air, resembling that of "Let Erin Remember," received several rounds of applause. M. Colonne was, however, obliged to hurry through the closing Numbers of his programme, owing to his rather frequent response to encores.

The rainy weather considerably thinned the ranks of the spectators on the Auteuil race-course this afternoon. The following were the results of the sport: Prix des Bastions—First, Please Yourself; second, Altesse; third, Luther. Won by two lengths; six lengths between the second and third horses. Prix Régalia—First, Doria; second, Le Torpilleur; third, Roger Bontemps. Won by a length; the same distance separated the second and third horses. Prix de Montretout—First, Rabastens; second, Dick; third, Framboisier. Won by a length and a half; a neck between the second and third horses. Prix de Vincennes—First, Ambassadeur (Barker), 10 to 1 agst; second, Montgeroult (Grey), 8 to 1 agst; third, Fifine (Basden), 7 to 1 agst. Won by a neck; a neck between the second and third horses. Prix Lord-Sting—First, L'Étourdi; second, Goliath; third, Blanche. Won by a length; five lengths between the second and third horses.

On the Bourse yesterday the last quotations were: Three per Cents., 82f 92½c (a rise of 5c); Four and a Half per Cents., 104f 6½c (a fall of 5c); Italians, 96f 80c (a fall of 10c); Turks, 15f 80c; Spanish Exteriors, 73f 50c; Egyptian Unified, 411f 25c; ditto Preference, 511f 25c; and Ottoman Bank, 535f 62c. Suez Canal shares closed at 2,232f 50c, and Rio Tinto at 670f. Three per Cents. were firm, but there was a slight fall in Four and a Half per Cents. Of the foreign stocks Italians, Hungarians, and Russians were weak, while there was a fall of 1f 25c in Egyptian Unified. Spanish Exteriors and Portuguese underwent no change. On the Petite Bourse last night prices left off as follows: Three per Cents., 82f 95c; Turks, 15f 78c; Spanish Exteriors, 73 17-32f; Egyptian Unified, 411f 87c; Ottoman Bank, 533f 75c; and Rio Tinto, 669f 68c.

EAST-END TRAGEDIES.

POLICE PROCLAMATION.

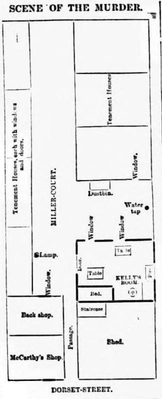
THE MURDER AND MUTILATION IN DORSET-STREET.

Throughout Saturday and yesterday the police, under Inspectors Abberline and Reid, of the Criminal Investigation Department, were busy in making exhaustive inquiries at lodging-houses and in every place where information could be gleaned, but their efforts were without material result. As a matter of fact the last murder committed by the maniac has not yielded any fresh clue to his whereabouts, nor provided a tittle of evidence which would serve to connect him with the crime. Nevertheless, a large amount of investigation has had to be undertaken. Since Friday evening until six o'clock yesterday four men had been detained for some time on suspicion, two at Commercial-street Police-station and one each at Leman-street and Arbour-square, but in each case the suspects were liberated, having fully satisfied the police of their doings upon the night of the crime. Various statements have had to be sifted, but no great reliance is to be placed upon them, although the persons who have made them will be called before the coroner, Dr. Macdonald, who opens the inquest this morning at the Shoreditch Town Hall. One of these depositions relates to the hour at which the crime was probably perpetrated, and if the deponent is not mistaken the deed must have been done in broad daylight. Mrs. Maxwell, who lives at 14, Dorset-street, but who assists her husband in the care of a common lodging house opposite Miller-court, says: "We stay up all night, and yesterday (Friday) as I was going home, carrying my lantern and other things with me, I saw the woman Kelly standing at the entrance of the court. It was then half-past eight, and as it was unusual for her to be seen about at that hour, I said to her, 'Hallo! what are you doing up so early?' She said, 'Oh, I'm very bad this morning. I have had the horrors. I have been drinking so much lately.' I said to her, 'Why don't you go and have half a pint of beer. It will put you right.' She replied, 'I've just had one, but I'm so bad I couldn't keep it down.' I didn't know then that she had separated from the man she had been living with, and I thought he had been 'paying' her. I then went out in the direction of Bishopsgate to do some errands, and on my return I saw Kelly standing outside the public-house talking to a man. That was the last I saw of her." Mrs. Maxwell is very positive as to this statement. Inquiry, however, tends to show that the deceased woman did not go to the public-house at the corner, nor was she served at any other in the neighbourhood on the morning of her death. The story also is inconsistent with the medical opinion, Mr. Phillips, the divisional police-surgeon, having thought that life had been extinct for five or six hours when the body was first examined between eleven a.m. and midday. This account of Mrs. Maxwell has naturally attracted a large amount of attention, and the woman has been severely cross-examined, without, however, in any way disturbing the confidence with which she makes her narrative. There is no question whatever of her having known the deceased most intimately, and it is not obvious what motive she could have for making a false representation. Yet there are many difficulties in the way of its acceptance. Mr. John M'Carthy and the police-officer who entered poor Mary Janet Kelly's room aver that the body was quite cold, and the blood coagulated, and it is understood the professional opinion will be to the effect that several hours must have elapsed before the discovery of the crime was made. Further, it has been objected that the witness, though living opposite Miller's-court, did not make any disclosure till long after the already published facts had been made known. To this, however, she replied, reasonably, that as her husband is the night watchman at Crossingham's lodging-house, they have to sleep in the daytime, and it was only in the afternoon that they heard what had happened; and even then, it appears, a long interval elapsed before she thought that her evidence could be of any material importance, and it was only after it had been given to a reporter that the police paid any attention to it. Mrs. Maxwell states that she took no particular notice of the young man with whom she observed Kelly conversing. She saw him at a distance; there was nothing in his appearance to arrest attention; and she supposed he was one of the many hands employed about the adjoining Spitalfields market. It is stated that a tailor, named Morris Lewis, has also affirmed that he saw Kelly between eight and nine in the morning. The question has arisen whether Mrs. Maxwell might not have confounded one morning with another, but when questioned on this point she avers that there were circumstances connected with her own work to enable her to fix it as Friday morning without any doubt or misgiving whatever. Against one portion of this statement the landlady of the public-house referred to declares that Kelly was not in their bar at the hour mentioned, and as they were not busy at the time she is quite confident as to her recollection.

Another tale of a neighbour will also be told to the coroner, who will no doubt closely inquire into its veracity. A woman, whose parents live in Miller's-court, in the house opposite the room where the tragedy took place, declares that at about three o'clock on Friday morning she entered Dorset-street on her way home, and she noticed three persons at the corner of the street, near the Britannia Public-house. There was a young man, respectably dressed, and with a dark moustache, talking to a woman whom she did not know, and also another woman, poorly clad, and without any head covering. The man and woman appeared to be the worse for liquor, and she heard the former say, "Are you coming?" whereupon the woman, who seemed to be obstinate, turned in an opposite direction to which the man apparently wished her to go. Mrs. Kennedy went on her way, and nothing unusual occurred until about half an hour later. She explains that she did not retire to rest immediately she reached her parents' abode, but sat up, and between half-past three and a quarter to four she heard a cry of "murder" in a woman's voice proceed from the direction in which Mary Kelly's room was situated. As the cry was not repeated she took no further notice of the circumstance until the morning, when she found the police in possession of the place. Upon being questioned by them as to what she had heard throughout the night, she made a statement to the above effect, which she has since supplemented by the following: "On Wednesday evening, about eight o'clock, I and my sister were in the neighbourhood of Bethnal-green-road, when we were accosted by a very suspicious-looking man about forty years of age. He was about 5ft 7in high, wore a short jacket, over which he had a long top-coat. His moustache was black, and he wore a billycock hat. He invited us to accompany him into a lonely spot, as he was known about there, and there was a policeman looking at him. No policeman was, however, in sight. The man made several strange remarks and appeared to be agitated. He was very white in the face, and prevented them looking him straight in the face, and he carried a black bag. He avoided walking with them, and led the way into a very dark thoroughfare at the back of the workhouse, inviting them to follow, which they did. Pushing open a small door in a pair of large gates, requested one of them to follow him, remarking, "I only want one of you," whereupon his companions became suspicious. He refused to leave his bag in possession of either of the women, and acted in a very strange manner. Both of them became alarmed at his behaviour, and escaped, at the same time raising a cry of "Jack the Ripper." A gentleman who was passing is stated to have intercepted the man, while the women ran off. The witness asserts that the individual whom she saw on Friday morning with the woman at the corner of Dorset-street resembled very closely the person who caused such alarm on the night in question, and that she would be able to recognise him.

Apart from the foregoing, there seems to be no reason to doubt that the woman was heard in her room as late as one a.m., singing, "Sweet Violets"—at times the poor creature helped to earn her living by selling flowers. Whether a cry of "Murder" was raised is open to question. A woman named Prater, an occupant of the same house, says there was such a call at about three a.m., but the word "Murder" is so commonly used in Spitalfields that it does not attract attention. The two people who can speak definitely as to the deceased's antecedents and her doings on the evening of Thursday are Joseph Barnett and Lizzie Allbrook, whose statements are appended. Barnett was the man who passed as Kelly's husband until last week, and he supplies the following full particulars: "I first met the deceased last Easter twelve-month, and lived with her from that time until last Tuesday week. I was in decent work in Billingsgate Market when I first encountered her, and we lived quite comfortably together. She was then twenty-two years of age, fresh-looking and well-behaved, though she had been walking the streets for some three years previously. She told me that her maiden name was Marie Jeanette Kelly, and that she was born in Limerick. Her parents, who were fairly well off, removed when she was a child to Wales, and they lived in Carmarthenshire. When she was but little over sixteen years of age she married a collier, but I do not remember his name. He was killed in an explosion in the mine, and then Marie went to Cardiff with her cousin, living as best she could. Thence she went to France, but remained only a short time. Afterwards she lived in a fashionable house of ill-fame in the West-end of London, but drifted from the West to the East-end, where she took lodgings in Pennington-street. Her father came from Wales and tried to find her there; but, hearing from her companions that he was looking for her, Marie kept out of the way. A brother in the 2nd Battalion Scots Guards came to see her once, but beyond that she saw none of her relations, nor did she correspond with them. When she was in Pennington-street a man named Morganstone lived with her, and subsequently a man named Joseph Fleming passed as her husband. She lived with me first of all in George-street, then in Paternoster-row, Dorset-street, but we were ejected from our lodgings there because we got drunk and did not pay our rent. We took lodgings afterwards in Brick-lane, and finally, about four months ago, in Miller's-court, where the murder occurred. We lived comfortably until Marie allowed a woman named Julia to sleep in the same room. I objected, and, as Mrs. Harvey afterwards came and stayed there, I left her, and took lodgings elsewhere. I told her I would come back if she would go somewhere else. I used to call there nearly every day, and if I had any money I gave her some. I last saw her alive at 7.30 on Thursday night, when I stopped about a quarter of an hour, and told her I had no money. Next day I heard there had been a murder in Miller's-court, and on my way there I met my sister's brother-in-law, and he told me Marie had been murdered. I went to the court, and there saw the police-inspector, and told him who I was, and where I had been the previous night. I was kept about for hours, and the constables examined my clothes for blood-stains, and finally, finding the account I gave of myself to be correct, let me go free. Marie never went on the streets when she lived with me. She would never have gone wrong again, and I should never have left her, if it had not been for the bad women stopping with her. She only let them in the room because she was good-hearted, and did not like to refuse them shelter on a cold, bitter night."

SCENE OF THE MURDER.



Lizzie Allbrook, a young woman of twenty, who resides in Miller's-court, and works at a lodging-house in Dorset-street, says: "I knew Mary Jane Kelly very well, as we were near neighbours. The last time I saw her was on Thursday night, about eight o'clock, when I left her in her room with Joe Barnett, the man who had been living with her. About the last thing she said to me was, 'Whatever you do, don't you do wrong and turn out as I have.' She had often spoken to me in this way, and warned me against going on the streets, as she had done. She told me, too, she was heartily sick of the life she was leading, and wished she had money enough to go back to Ireland, where her people lived. I don't believe she would have gone out as she did if she had not been obliged to do so in order to keep herself from starvation. She had talked to me about her friends several times, and on one occasion told me she had a female relation in London who was on the stage."

A somewhat important investigation was made on Saturday in the room in Miller's-court in which the crime was perpetrated. There was reason to believe that the murderer had burnt something before leaving the place after the deed, and accordingly the ashes and other matter in the grate were carefully preserved. On Saturday afternoon Dr. Phillips and Dr. Macdonald, M.P., the coroner for the district, visited Miller's-court, and after the refuse had been passed through a sieve it was subjected to the closest scrutiny by the medical gentlemen. Nothing, however, was found which is likely to afford any assistance or clue to the police. The doctors were engaged some hours at the Mortuary, Shoreditch-churchyard, in making a post-mortem examination. Every portion of the body was fully accounted for, and at the conclusion of the investigation the various portions were sewn together and placed in a coffin. The furniture of the room consisted of the bed upon which the body was stretched, which was placed next to a disused washstand in the corner behind the door, and opposite the two windows, in the smaller one of which there were two panes of glass broken. A man's coat was put across these to keep out the draught. Close to the larger window stood a table, and another table of smaller size was placed between it and the bed, and it was upon this that the flesh stripped from the body was heaped. This article of furniture, when the door was opened, was partly hidden by it. Next to the fireplace was a cupboard. Means of observation were abundant in this small courtyard. A gas lamp is fixed on the opposite side of the passage, and from several windows a view could have been obtained of the room. From M'Carthy's back shop a small window looks into the narrow court, through which any one passing into the doorway could have been seen. In addition to this there is another small window in the next house, while the tenants of at least two of the three tenements on the left-hand side could have overlooked from their apartments the room rented by Kelly.

The Scotland-yard authorities have issued the following proclamation:

"Murder.—Pardon.—Whereas, on November 8th or 9th, in Miller-court, Dorset-street, Spitalfields, Mary Janet Kelly was murdered by some person or persons unknown, the Secretary of State will advise the grant of her Majesty's gracious pardon to any accomplice not being a person who contrived or actually committed the murder, who shall give such information and evidence as shall lead to the discovery and conviction of the person or persons who committed the murder.—(Signed) Charles Warren, the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. Metropolitan Police Office, 4, Whitehall-place, Nov. 10, 1888."

A correspondent forwards copies of descriptions of certain men who were last seen in the company of the woman who was murdered in Berner-street and of the woman who was mutilated in Mitre-square. These authentic descriptions, we have reason to know, have been secretly circulated by the authorities of Scotland-yard since Oct. 26, but the complete details have never been made public. This reticence is one of the mysteries of police administration, and it is difficult to find an explanation to account for the fact that this important information has been "confidentially communicated" to police-officers throughout the kingdom, but has been withheld from the people who have had the best opportunities of seeing and of, therefore, recognising the assassin. The point which the police appear to have been at most pains to suppress is the significant one that the unknown murderer has the "appearance of a sailor."

The notice is headed: "Apprehensions sought. Murder. Metropolitan Police District"; and it proceeds:

"The woodcut sketches, purporting to resemble the persons last seen with the murdered women, which have appeared in The Daily Telegraph, were not authorised by police. The following are the descriptions of the persons seen:

"At 12.35 a.m., 30th September, with Elizabeth Stride, found murdered at one a.m., same date, in Berner-street—A man, aged 28, height 5ft 8in, complexion dark, small dark moustache; dress, black diagonal coat, hard felt hat, collar and tie; respectable appearance; carried a parcel wrapped up in a newspaper.

"At 12.45 a.m., 30th, with same woman, in Berner-street, a man, age about 30, height 5ft 5in, complexion fair, hair dark, small brown moustache, full face, broad shoulders; dress, dark jacket and trousers, black cap with peak.

"Information to be forwarded to the Metropolitan Police Office, Great Scotland-yard, London, S.W.

"At 1.35 a.m., 30th Sept., with Catherine Eddowes, in Church-passage, leading to Mitre-square, where she was found murdered at 1.45 a.m., same date, a man, age 30, height 5ft 7 or 8 in., complexion fair, moustache fair, medium build; dress, pepper-and-salt colour loose jacket, grey cloth cap, with peak of the same material, reddish neckerchief tied in knot; appearance of a sailor.

"Information respecting this man to be forwarded to Inspector M'William, 26, Old Jewry, London, E.C."

It will be observed that there is by no means an agreement of testimony in regard to the important point of the supposed murderer's personal appearance. In this connection it may be recalled that the following descriptions were given in evidence. Wm. Marshall said, on the night of the Berner-street murder, at a quarter to twelve o'clock, he saw in that thoroughfare a middle-aged man, 5ft 6in high, talking to Stride. His dress was a black cutaway coat and dark trousers, a round cap with a small peak, such as a sailor would wear. He was without whiskers, looked like a clerk, carried nothing in his hand, and spoke in the tone of an educated man. Another witness testified that he saw a man with the deceased woman in Berners-street an hour later than did Marshall. The man was 5ft 7in high, and had a long dark overcoat. Smith, the police-constable, who also observed the couple, described the man as 5ft 7in high, wearing dark clothes, cutaway coat, hard felt hat, twenty-eight years of age, and of respectable look. He carried a parcel, wrapped in a newspaper.

As regards the Mitre-square victim, reference was made at the inquest to a man, rough and shabby, with a peaked cloth cap, who was observed by two witnesses at the corner of Church-passage at twenty-five minutes to two a.m. on Sunday, Sept. 30, but details were, at the request of Mr. Crawford, the City Solicitor, not pressed for. Statements not taken in evidence were made by Matthew Packer, a shopkeeper, of Berner-street, and other persons, as to the identity of the man seen with Stride in Berner-street. Packer sold the couple grapes, and had a conversation with the man, whom he recollects clearly as a square-built fellow, thirty years of age, full in the face, dark moustache, and alert-looking. He wore a long black coat and felt hat. A Mrs. Mortimer's attention on the same night was attracted to a young man, who carried a black bag, who passed along Berner-street just before the murder, and an individual who had a black bag held some suggestive conversation shortly after midnight in the Three Nuns Hotel, at Aldgate, with Albert Bacher, who said he was a dark man, with dark clothes, morning coat, black tie, &c. His height was about 5ft 6in. A third witness, a dairyman of Little Turner-street, Commercial-road, has given information respecting a man with a black bag, who was supposed to have committed the Buck's-row murder, and to have attempted another on the following night, when he came hurriedly to Little Turner-street, and in a back shed covered up his suit of clothes with white overalls, which he took out of a shiny bag, and rushed away with the words, "I think I've got a clue." The characteristics of this individual corresponded with the description given by Packer. With regard to the murder in Hanbury-street, according to one witness, a Mrs. Long, the man who was seen talking to Annie Chapman in Hanbury-street at half-past five on the morning of Sept. 8, and who is believed to have been her murderer, was a foreigner of dark complexion, over forty years of age, a little taller than the deceased (who was 5ft), of shabby-genteel appearance, with a brown deerstalker hat on his head, and a dark coat on his back. In connection with the same murder, Thomas Edo, a signalman, deposed that he saw in the Cambridge Heath-road, a man 5ft 8in high, thirty-five years of age, with a dark moustache and whiskers, and a pair of clean white overalls over dark trousers. The witness saw sticking out of the man's pocket about four inches of a knife. On the morning of the murder, if the statements of three people can be relied upon, a man entered the Prince Albert public-house at the corner of Brushfield-street. He wore a brown stiff hat, a dark coat, no waistcoat, a light blue check shirt, pepper-and-salt coloured trousers, and was of shabby, genteel appearance. His moustache was sandy, his height about 5ft 8in, and his age between forty and fifty. With regard to the Buck's-row tragedy a man was seen and spoken to in the street, but not much attention was paid to him, and he went away, and has never since been noticed.

Several arrests have been made, but all the persons taken into custody were released after short periods of detention, having been able to give the police satisfactory explanations of their movements.

A most minute search has been conducted by the police and medical gentlemen in the room where the crime was perpetrated, but practically nothing in the nature of a clue has been obtained. The man's coat discovered there belonged to Mrs. Harvey, who had lived with the woman Kelly; whilst the ashes, which have been carefully sifted, reveal no traces of burnt human flesh.

Yesterday the constabulary made a complete census of Dorset-street, having especial reference to the persons within it on Thursday night. Although it is but a short thoroughfare there are, it is stated, no fewer than 1,200 men who sleep every night in the common lodging-houses with which it abounds.

Throughout Saturday and yesterday the crowd gathered in front of Miller's-court was not large, and at night the evangelistic services were held as usual in the lodging-houses by small bands of men and women, who sometimes take with them a harmonium or other musical instrument to make their gatherings more attractive. Open-air preachings were proceeding at the street corners. Indeed, Commercial-street appeared to be singularly favoured in the matter of moral agencies. At St. Jude's Church there is a "worship hour" from 8.30 to 9.30 after the ordinary service. In Toynbee Hall, close by, a company of intelligent-looking young men listened to a discussion, led by Mr. Cunninghame, secretary of the Parnell Commission, on "Pleasure and Pain as the Basis of Ethical Systems." Spitalfields Church, which is close to the scene of the murder, and whose visitors are familiar with all these haunts, had a large congregation. It is the practical experience of the district that the greatest ameliorations that have been made in the neighbourhood have followed the destruction of rookeries, the construction of broad, well-lighted thoroughfares, and the erection of cheap, wholesome dwellings.

MIDNIGHT.

Great excitement was caused shortly before ten o'clock to-night in the East-end by the arrest of a man with a blackened face, who publicly proclaimed himself to be "Jack the Ripper." This was at the corner of Wentworth-street, Commercial-street, near the scene of the latest crime. Two young men, one a discharged soldier, immediately seized him, and the great crowds which always on Sunday night parade this neighbourhood raised a cry of "Lynch him." Sticks were raised, and the man was furiously attacked; and, but for the timely arrival of the police, he would have been seriously injured. The police took him to Leman-street station, when the prisoner proved to be a very remarkable person. He refused to give any name, but asserted that he was a doctor at St. George's Hospital. His age is about thirty-five years, height 5ft 7in, complexion dark, and dark moustache, and he was wearing spectacles. He wore no waistcoat, but had an ordinary jersey vest beneath his coat. In his pocket he had a double-peaked light check cap, and at the time of his arrest was bareheaded. It took four constables and four civilians to convey him to the station and protect him from the infuriated crowd. He is detained in custody.

The Jubilee statue of her Majesty the Queen, which is to be erected in the Government House, Singapore, has been placed on a revolving platform in the hall of the Colonial Office for private view before being forwarded to its destination.

Count Nigra, Italian Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, according to Saturday's Riforma, is the bearer of the Collar of the Order of the Annonciade which has been conferred upon Count Kalnoky by King Humbert.

Fox Hunting.—The first meet of the season with the West Norfolk Foxhounds took place at Hillington on Saturday, in very favourable weather. The field was a very large one, and included the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Albert Victor, and Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud. The Duc d'Aumale and other distinguished persons joined in the run, which was very successful.

THE NAVY.

At the Admiralty on Saturday the following appointments were announced: Commanders—John Ferris, to the Archer; Harry Seawell F. Niblett, to the Pembroke, additional (both to date 27th inst.) Dedicated to England's Naval Volunteers.

THE NAVAL BRIGADE. By H. HAWKINS. Post free, 2s. Keys F (A to D) and G (B to E).

We are the sturdy sons of old Britannia,
Whose ocean rule there is no one can deny,
Old England, Queen of ev'ry water,
Proud in peace, yet there's none dare thee defy!
The nations of the earth stand ever ready,
Our Motherland, to live or die for thee;
While Britons breathe, Britannia must be ruler
Of the waves, the Mistress of the sea.

Chorus (ad lib.)

Pull then together, tars, for England,
Pull for the land we love so well;
The Union Jack floats for freedom,
And tells us of those who fighting fell.

In days gone by, when our Old Britannia
Was threatened on the land and on the sea,
She called her valiant children answered—
As bravely as loudly answer we.
That hour when fierce foemen press thy borders
Loved England, will you ever find us true,
For our country and our kindred we are ready,
During all—even death were sweet for you!

Chorus (ad lib.)

Pull then together, tars, for England,
Pull for the land we love so well;
The Union Jack floats for freedom,
And tells us of those who fighting fell.

PERSONS who SUFFER from a chronic inflammatory condition of the mucous membrane, periodically assuming an acute aspect in the form of COUGH, Catarrh, Bronchitis, and Asthma, will find POWELL'S BALSAM of ANISEED a friend indeed.—Sold by Chemists throughout the world, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 3d. per bottle. See Trade Mark, "Lion, Net, and Mouse." Established 70 years.

CAUTION.—Only articles possessing some special and acknowledged excellence are worth imitating; and the unprecedented success of POWELL'S BALSAM of ANISEED has induced dishonest traders to defraud the public with utterly worthless imitations. In order, therefore, to protect the public against such fraudulent imitations, the well-known Trade Mark—"Lion, Net, and Mouse"—is conspicuously printed on the wrapper of every bottle of Powell's Balsam of Aniseed, and any imitation of the same is forgery and a breach of the law relating to trade marks.

POWELL'S BALSAM of ANISEED.—The high character of this old-established remedy for Pulmonary and Bronchial Disorders is repeatedly confirmed by the gratifying letters received from those who have experienced its great worth. Sold by Chemists everywhere.

LIVER PILLS.—Dr. KING'S LIVER PILLS, containing dandelion and quinine, without mercury, are far above all others as the surest, mildest, and best means of removing obstructions and irregularities of the liver and stomach, so ensuring perfect health. Dr. King's Pills are sold everywhere.
